County replaces public defender

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Disregarding the top choice among local attorneys, Twin Falls County commissioners decided to replace 10-year-veteran county public defender Mike Wood with his chief understudy, John Olson.

"I'm disappointed, I thought I would be allowed to continue as public defender," said Wood, who learned Thursday of their decision. He intends to start a private practice in Twin Falls.

Olson will take over the helm Oct. 1 with an annual salary of about $52,000. Olson brings "fresh ideas" about management to the public defender's office and seems willing to work with the county "as a team," Commissioner Dennis Maughan said.

Olson, who has five years of defense experience, was the second choice of a committee of attorneys who reviewed 10 applicants for Wood's job. Commissioners selected Olson as public defender on Wednesday after interviews with the top three candidates last week.

Legal officials who know both Wood and Olson said they are good attorneys, but were surprised that Wood didn't get reappointed.

"I think Mike got a raw deal, and I'm really surprised, though I hesitate to say that because I really like John," said Lisa Barini-Garcia, a former deputy public defender for Wood.

"John is just as compassionate – probably, but he's not an old war horse like Mike," Barini-Garcia said. In complex criminal cases, "it might make a difference just because of the things you learn, when experience is the teacher, that you don't learn any other way," she said.

Commissioners had no problem

Future Idaho farmers come calling

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Clad in blue and gold, more than 1,000 high school Future Farmers of America descended on Twin Falls this week, swelling restaurants and hotels and eyeing the mall.

"I've got $150 bucks and my checkbook," said Clint Zenner of Nezperce, lunching at Arby's restaurant with fellow FFA members Thursday.

For Twin Falls hotels, the Idaho FFA Convention boosts normally slow early-spring business, Weston Plaza sales director Karen Fiscus said. FFA students and advisors currently fill up to three-fourths of the hotel's 200 rooms, she said Thursday.

"FFA is one of our bigger groups that stay here," Fiscus said. "Off the top of my head, I can't think of one bigger."

After a morning of judging livestock at the convention, the Nezperce boys sat surrounded by roast beef sandwich wrappers, discussing options for their few hours of free time in the city. Wednesday night, they saw a movie; Thursday night, they planned to shop, Brian Webster said.

Arby's Assistant Manager Debbie Mondragon said her stream of FFA customers started the lunch rush an hour earlier than usual and kept it jumping.

"We had a lot (of FFA students). It has impacted us a great deal today," she said. Several other restaurants in north Twin Falls reported increased business Thursday as well.

— Ilene Cook, receptionist

Zenner, Webster and their pals and advisors – more than 2 percent of their town's population – represent one of the smaller FFA chapters from across the state attending the annual three-day conference.

Today is the convention's big day, and late registrations will swell Twin Falls' FFA population even further, Nezperce adviser Robert Pratt said.

Held at the College of Southern Idaho, the convention features speakers, leadership and agriscience awards, FFA degrees, contests and scholarship interviews.

FFA organizers have held the annual event in several other Idaho cities but have stuck to Twin Falls lately – "this has the best facilities," said Pratt, citing the CSI campus and the numerous hotels.

And in blue jackets and white shirts, the FFA students are nice to have around, Weston Inn receptionist Ilene Cook said.

"They seem to act the part. They're nice kids," Cook said.

Crystal Ralstin and her four fellow FFAers from Lapwai came to Twin Falls with about $100 each – and most had plans to spend it. Trained by previous years' conventions in Twin Falls, they've set an Arby's-for-lunch, North's-Chuck-Wagon-for-supper tradition.

Did the Lapwai girls go to the mall?

"Right when we got here," Ralstin said.

Walton will try to oust Darrington

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

HEYBURN – Anti-gay-rights activist Kelly Walton says he'll challenge Declo Republican Denton Darrington for his Senate seat – partly over Darrington's vote for mandatory farmworker's compensation.

"I believe Darrington did the district a tremendous disservice by voting to mandate worker's comp for farmers and ranchers," the Heyburn contractor said Thursday. Walton hasn't yet filed as a District 25 GOP candidate but plans to late next week, he said.

Walton

The activist wouldn't say whether the Farm Bureau or other agricultural groups put him up to the race.

"I can't answer that one at this point," he said.

Darrington

Farm Bureau information director Mike Tracy said he didn't know that Walton was going to run – though others in the organization might.

Walton won't name supporters until endorsements are in concrete, he said. But certain groups did urge him to run, he said, and his "feelers of support" in the district brought "tremendous" results.

"As I view Darrington's voting record on a number of economic and family issues," Walton said, "I believe he's vulnerable." He specified just one "family issue" – 1994's failed anti-gay-rights ballot measure, Proposition 1.

"(Walton's) got a lot of moxie to take on the dean of the Senate," Kerrick said, calling the Senate judiciary and rules chairman "an intelligent, gifted legislator with a long history of conscientious work."

"It would really amaze me if anyone was able to take (Darrington) out," Kerrick said. "At best, (Walton) would only be a fraction of what Denton Darrington has been."

Militant Freeman yanked from courtroom

The Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. — A militant member of the Freemen was removed from his courtroom arraignment Thursday after an outburst in which he implored the judge and "the rest of these perverts" to be honest.

Daniel Petersen Jr., 53, was taken to a holding cell, where his repeated objections came across in a tinny echo through a closed-circuit TV monitor.

Petersen and Freeman LeRoy Schweitzer, 57, refused to enter pleas to federal charges of threatening public officials and bank, financial and mail fraud.

U.S. Magistrate Richard Anderson entered innocent pleas for them, and refused their request to make a 10-minute statement about their beliefs and their claims that their 11th Amendment rights were being violated.

The 11th Amendment says the judicial power of the United States does not extend to lawsuits against a state.

The men were arrested Monday, reportedly on the isolated, 960-acre ranch where the Freemen have been holed up, near Jordan, Mont., about 150 miles northeast of Billings. The arrests sparked a standoff between

Fugitive Freemen – A3

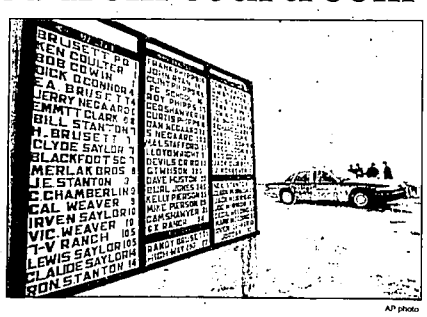

Freemen and FBI agents which continued Thursday.

The FBI also gave the first sign Thursday that it had failed to make any progress in their negotiations with the 12 or so Freemen believed to still be inside the compound. Agents agreed to let a sister of two Freemen leaders deliver a community petition she helped draft, urging them to surrender.

In court Thursday, Schweitzer and Petersen were more docile at first than they were on Tuesday, when their tirades forced the hearing to be postponed. They sat quietly while the judge read the 55-count indictment against them.

But when the judge asked them to enter pleas, Petersen became upset and began interrupting with objections.

"I want you to be an honest person and the rest of these perverts to be honest people," he said, shouting about the state and federal constitutions as he was led from the courtroom. Anderson ordered the holding cell's audio shut off to avoid further disruptions.

Distances in miles to homes in the sparsely settled area outside Jordan, Mont., are given on this sign at a road junction. In the background, FBI and Montana Highway Patrol officers check identification of media people covering the Freemen standoff.

Heavy snow covers Yellowstone area, surrounding states

The Associated Press

Cold rain and snow swept through the Southeast and West on Thursday as more than a foot of snow fell in some parts of Yellowstone National Park.

Rain showers and thunderstorms extended across the Southeast from the lower Mississippi Valley to the middle Atlantic Coast. Savannah, Ga., and Sumter, S.C., received more than an inch of rain.

Freezing rain was scattered throughout the mountain valleys of southwest Virginia and southeast West Virginia on Thursday morning.

Heavy snow fell overnight in the mountains of central Idaho and into southern Montana and northern Wyoming. More than a foot of snow fell in parts of Yellowstone National Park.

The Sun Valley area of Idaho, including Ketchum and Hailey, received 6 to 8 inches of snow. Eight inches fell at Island Park in extreme eastern Idaho.

Snow in central and northeastern Oregon caused several highway accidents. U.S. 97 was closed overnight Wednesday after a gasoline tanker and hay truck collided, strewing hay across the roadway.

Thunderstorms and heavy rainfall were possible Thursday from the Florida peninsula, Kentucky, Tennessee, and southeast Arkansas to the Mid-Atlantic region. Rain with snow mixed in was possible over the eastern Great Lakes and the central Appalachians.

The lowest wind chill, the rating based on wind and temperature, was 27 below zero in Livingston, Mont.

Today's weather fact

If you listen to weather forecasts, there is often a barometric reading such as " ... 29.91 and falling." That means the atmospheric pressure will support a column of mercury 29.91 inches tall. The average atmospheric pressure at sea level under normal conditions is 29.92 inches. A reading above 30 inches is considered higher than normal and a reading below that lower than normal. High pressure indicates nice weather, low presages stormy.

Panel approves national park fee increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee approved legislation Thursday to raise fees at national parks despite charges by Democratic critics that the increases unfairly target the elderly, poor families and youngsters.

The bill pushed by House Republicans would remove the current cap on entry fees at parks, end a program that has allowed senior citizens to avoid entry fees and for the first time charge youngsters under 16 years of age to use a park.

"Someone with four kids is going to be priced out of the parks," said Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., one of a dozen Democrats who had favored more modest fee increases.

The Republican legislation cleared the House Resources Committee by a 24-12 vote largely along party lines. Democrats called it extreme and warned if it passes the House, it would run into trouble in the Senate and face a presidential veto.

Congress for years has struggled with proposals to boost entry and user fees at national parks, which face mounting repair backlogs at a time of scarce federal money.

Currently most fees are capped at $3 per person and $5 per carload at most of the 200 parks and monuments where fees are charged, according to Park Service spokesman David Barna. An entry fee of $10 per carload is charged at Yosemite National Park and the Grand Canyon.

The House bill would end the cap, leaving it up to the Park Service to set maximum charges and shift most fees to a per-person basis instead of by the carload. It also would expand the number of parks where fees could be charged.

"We're trying to put some money into the hands of the Park Service," said Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, a chief architect of the bill. He said the current fees subsidize park visitors, most of whom, he said, would prefer paying their own way.

But Democratic critics focused in on provisions that would:

- Scrap the Golden Age Passport, a lifetime free entrance pass for people 62 years or older for a one-time fee of $10. Senior citizens would pay regular fees.
- For the first time, charge entry fees for those 16 years or younger. Visitors 12 years or younger would get in at half price.
- Establish fees on a per-person basis, instead of by carloads.

The first time charge entry fees at visitor centers and increase fees for camping and other services.

A proposal offered by Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., would have capped fees at $6 per person, retained the pass for senior citizens and continued to allow children into parks for free. It was defeated 24-15.

In an attempt to blunt criticism, supporters agreed to take out of the bill provisions that would have imposed fees on the disabled and the blind, and decided against charging visitors for using bathroom facilities.

The panel also agreed under pressure from Democrats to reinstate fees on airlines who run tourist charters over the Grand Canyon and other parks after several lawmakers noted the irony of charging the elderly and not the tour operators.

Space crews say emotional farewell

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — With bear hugs and teary eyes, space shuttle Atlantis' astronauts said goodbye to the crew of Russia's space station Mir and then flew away Thursday, leaving Shannon Lucid behind for a five-month stay in orbit.

Atlantis' crew unlatched the shuttle from Mir after five days of docked flight some 250 miles above Earth. The shuttle circled Mir once for a picture-taking session and then went on its way; it's scheduled to return to Earth on Saturday.

"It's kind of a sad thing to see Mir disappearing on us here," pilot Richard Searfoss said.

Unable to communicate with Mir because of a bad radio link, the astronauts had to relay their final farewell and best wishes to Lucid and her two Russian colleagues via the control centers.

The farewell ceremony earlier in the day was a sentimental moment for all eight space travelers, but especially for shuttle commander Kevin Chilton, who wiped his eyes and wrapped his arms around cosmonauts Yuri Onufrienko and Yuri Usachev.

"We know we'll see Shannon again when she comes back," Chilton said. "But there's a big ocean between Russia and America, and we're not so confident, or sure, or certain I should say, that we'll ever see our two friends Yuri and Yuri again."

He paused to regain his composure, then added: "In person."

Usachev said he wished they could remain together longer, "but Shannon is with us now ... and we'll do the good work that needs to be done."

Wood

with Wood, except that they wanted a public defender who can be fired at any time like "any other department head," Maughan said. Wood's contract requires he receive nine months advance notice of his termination.

Olson, who accepted the "at-will" termination clause, said he doesn't plan any major changes in the public defender's office.

Maughan said the commissioners liked his ideas about management, including investigating the financial backgrounds of criminal defendants who apply for a public defender to represent them.

His experience is more brief than Wood's. Olson said he has served as co-counsel on one death penalty case in his career. The American Bar Association suggests attorneys serve on three death penalty cases, or up to six cases of similar complexity, before they try a death penalty case themselves.

Olson said he would like to be more approachable than several members of Wood's support staff felt Wood was, and that he would "build a good relationship with the county, if the county didn't feel there was a close relationship there already."

"I am probably a more shy person than Mike is, but we both have the same bedrock commitment" to criminal defense, Olson said.

From Denver, Colo., Olson graduated with a degree in law from Lewis and Clark University in 1990 in Portland, Ore. He lives in Jerome with his wife and three children.

that's unacceptable to conservatives, he said.

"In general," Walton said, "Darrington has demonstrated a real desire to avoid the controversial issues of the day."

The 14-year Senate veteran, who said Thursday he will run for re-election, defended his recent worker's compensation vote and his record in the Idaho Legislature.

"It was a very difficult vote," Darrington said. "But I thought it was important to get the best deal we could for ag."

And involvement in sentencing laws, environmental and Health and Welfare issues have proved him no stranger to controversy, he contends.

"I have been a consensus builder as long as I've been in the legislature," Darrington said. "You have to build consensus to get things done."

Walton said his campaign might not get much organized help from the anti-gay-rights Idaho Citizens Alliance, which is immersed in signature-gathering for four initiatives.

He conceded, "It's going to be very tough to win this race." But, win or lose, he wants Darrington to get his message: "Pay a lot more attention to your constituents."

Senate passes bill ending farm subsidies

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Senate, in a 74-26 vote, Thursday passed a sweeping change in the government's farm programs.

The compromise bill will now go to the House of Representatives for final passage and then on to President Clinton for his expected signature.

The bill would bring an end to most farm subsidies over the next seven years.

Health coverage bill passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking for success where President Clinton failed, the Republican-controlled House passed legislation Thursday night to guarantee access to health insurance to millions of Americans who lose or leave their jobs.

The vote was 267-151.

Passage sent the measure to the Senate, where Majority Leader Bob Dole, the GOP presidential nominee-in-waiting, has scheduled debate for next month on a more modest measure. That narrower bill enjoys substantial bipartisan support and has the backing of the White House, as well.

"After years of talking about health care reform we are now, with a new Republican majority, going to enact health care reform," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. He said the measure provides for "availability and affordability" of insurance for millions who now go without it.

But the bill also contains several provisions that drew fire from the White House and Democratic critics, including ceilings on medical malpractice awards and a system of tax-deductible, individual savings accounts to cover expenses.

Fugatives aren't from around there

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Five fugitives who have sought refuge with a Montana militant group involved in a standoff with federal agents are from North Carolina.

Three Charlotte men are wanted in North Carolina for assaulting police officers, and a man and woman from Four Oaks in Johnston County are wanted in Colorado on charges of conspiracy and securities fraud.

The standoff began Monday at a wheat and sheep farm outside Jordan, Mont. Freemen refuse to pay taxes and believe they are the chosen people, independent of any established authority.

The Montana attorney general estimates 12 people are holed up on the farm, now surrounded by federal agents. The FBI confirmed Thursday that the five North Carolina fugitives are believed to be among those on the farm.

The FBI has issued arrest warrants for all five on federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

"We were familiar with all these people," said Pam Stevenson, a senior analyst with the State Bureau of Investigation's criminal intelligence section.

While authorities do not believe a chapter of the Montana Freemen has started in North Carolina, Stevenson believes North Carolina anti-government groups are sending members to Montana to learn Freemen ways.

Stevenson said the Freemen conduct seminars, teaching how to set up bogus court systems and then to use those court systems to file unlawful liens and judgments against their enemies.

"We have no idea how many from groups here have gone to Montana for training," she said.

Among the five fugitives believed to be on the Montana farm are Steven Charles Hance, 46, and his two sons, John Richard Hance, 19, and James Edward Hance, 23. The three were charged in August 1995 with assaulting police officers and resisting arrest when pulled over in Gaston County for driving without license plates. They became fugitives when they failed to appear for a court date on March 4.

Elaborate deception netted fugative leaders near ranch

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — An undercover agent posing as ham radio antenna installer gained the confidence of leaders of a Montana anti-government group in a scheme that resulted in their arrests, a newspaper reported.

The Spokesman-Review newspaper quoted unnamed sources "familiar with the operation" in detailing how freemen leaders LeRoy Schweitzer and Daniel Petersen Jr. were nabbed Monday.

A man who was either an undercover officer or paid informant had been attending common law classes at the freemen's compound and befriended the two leaders and others, the newspaper said.

The freemen, who use ham radios to exchange information and messages, wanted to erect a radio antenna on the hilltop property of freeman Ralph Clark, who remains a fugitive.

An installation crew arrived Monday morning, spreading the materials on a blue tarpaulin on the ridge where the tower was to be built.

At some point, the undercover agent approached Schweitzer and Petersen and asked whether they could briefly leave the freemen headquarters to approve the tower location.

The freemen were each wearing two handguns when they took the short drive to the tower site, the newspaper reported Wednesday.

Once there, FBI agents with guns drawn swooped in and made the arrests.

Bogus checks in southern Utah may be tied to pair in custody

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — Southwestern Utah authorities say bogus checks linked to the militant anti-government freemen of Montana have been detected in the area.

The checks have been used in attempts to purchase property, settle medical and dental bills, and pay federal and local taxes, Washington County Attorney Eric Ludlow said.

The checks are purportedly connected to LeRoy Schweitzer, whose name appears on one of the checks, and Daniel Petersen. Schweitzer and Petersen were arrested in Montana Tuesday and face federal charges of writing millions of dollars in fraudulent checks and money orders.

Ludlow warned Thursday that potential victims of the scheme could lose more than billing amounts because the checks are overpayments that demand immediate reimbursement.

The Washington County treasurer's office, the St. George Post Office and up to four area businesses have been presented with the fraudulent checks, Ludlow said. "We just told the people 'No, we can't cash these, and they aren't any good,'" said St. George Postmaster Sandra Anderson.

The checks — with the words "Certified Bankers Check" and "Comptroller Warrant" along the top — are claimed to be payable at U.S. Post offices, U.S. Treasury Departments and the U.S. Comptroller of Currency.

Washington County Treasurer Alis Ritz, one of the recipients, identified the fraud immediately and called Ludlow's office.

Ritz said an accompanying letter confirmed her suspicions that the check was bogus.

Tennessee Senate rejects evolution bill

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The state Senate voted Thursday to kill a bill that would have let school boards fire teachers who tell students that evolution is fact.

The bill, which dredged up memories of the infamous Scopes "Monkey Trial," would have made the teaching of evolution as fact a form of insubordination. It would have allowed but not required school boards to fire the offenders. It was defeated in a 20-13 vote.

Sen. Tommy Burks, a Democrat, insisted his bill was a "simple, non-complex piece of legislation" but it occupied a large amount of lawmakers' time.

Numerous amendments were offered, including some Burks said were intended to kill his bill. Among the amendments that did pass — before the entire bill was killed — specified that teaching evolution as fact was not a crime. The original bill was silent on that issue.

Some blood cells may resist HIV infection

NEW YORK — People who manage to avoid infection with the AIDS virus despite repeated exposure might be protected by certain blood cells that actively resist HIV, a study suggests.

HIV normally infects so-called CD4 blood cells readily. But CD4 cells from people who avoided infection were found to be unusually resistant, perhaps through overproduction of anti-viral chemicals.

A second study found that in people who are infected, certain immune system genes may strongly affect how long they can go without developing AIDS.

The studies, in the April issue of the journal Nature Medicine, may someday lead to new ways to prevent infection and help in deciding how and when to treat infected people, researchers said.

Study: Drugs may cut Alzheimer's risk

SAN FRANCISCO — Ibuprofen, the drug contained in such pain relievers as Advil, Motrin and Nuprin, may reduce the risk of developing Alzheimer's disease by up to 60 percent, researchers reported Thursday.

Aspirin and acetaminophen, which is in pain relievers such as Tylenol, appeared to have no effect on preventing the disease, according to the 14-year Johns Hopkins University study of 2,065 elderly people.

The study is the latest and one of the largest suggesting that non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs, or NSAIDs, help the brain fight the effects of amyloid protein deposits linked to Alzheimer's. Ibuprofen is the most common NSAID.

Postal Service to sponsor conventions

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service says it wants to donate $1 million to this summer's Republican and Democratic conventions, for marketing purposes, not politics.

The Postal Service hopes that by becoming an "official sponsor" of the conventions it will be able to promote its overnight and Priority Mail services to thousands of business and political leaders who will attend the conventions.

"Being at conventions — particularly conventions drawing together decision-makers — makes sense to us," Lorin E. Smith, chief marketing officer, said Thursday.

It is illegal for federal agencies to use public money for political purposes. The Postal Service plans to get around that by donating to the host committees established to accept corporate donations.

Group: 'Net marketing exploits kids

WASHINGTON — A group that wants TV and other media to be more educational asked the government Thursday to protect children from what it considers exploitative marketing on the Internet.

The Center for Media Education said a number of businesses, including Kellogg's Co., Frito Lay Inc. and SpectraCom Inc., have designed web sites — places on the Internet where companies or individuals can be reached — "to capture the loyalty and spending power" of children.

Line-item veto is major power shift

By Tom Raum
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Presidents since Jefferson have bemoaned the lack of power to strike specific items from spending bills.

Now a Republican Congress and a Democratic president are providing that line-item veto, shifting vital purse-string powers to the White House.

Budget politics may never be the same — if courts uphold the constitutionality of the measure President Clinton is poised to sign. Sent to Clinton on Thursday by the House, the legislation could open every line of the federal budget to partisan assault.

One analyst said a president could use the power "as a hammer," threatening to veto dam projects or federal buildings in a lawmaker's district unless he supported the White House on other issues.

It marks the biggest shift of power from one branch of government to another since 1974, when Congress passed legislation to stop then-President Nixon from "impounding" — or refusing to spend — money on projects he disliked.

Both of Idaho's Republican representatives, Mike Crapo and Helen Chenoweth, voted for the line-item veto, which passed 232-177.

In all, 221 Republicans and 11 Democrats voted for it; 3 Republicans, 173 Democrats and 1 independent voted against it.

Democratic Congresses routinely brushed aside pleas by GOP Presidents Reagan and Bush for line-item veto authority. But this year the stars lined up in the political firmament, with Republicans including the line-item veto in their "Contract with America" and Democratic President Clinton eagerly embracing it.

To try to get beyond the presidential election, and to satisfy GOP misgivings over handing such powers to Clinton, both sides agreed to make the effective date next Jan. 1.

Thus, Republicans are betting Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the expected GOP nominee, will be the first to use the new powers. And Democrats are hoping Clinton will be able to exercise them as he begins a second term.

The legislation will permit a president for the first time to cancel specific programs or projects from spending bills and to strike narrowly targeted special-interest tax breaks.

Among some more recent items Clinton would have stricken had he already had such powers, according to the Office of Management and Budget:

• Some $58 million in a 1995 agricultural bill in grants for university research programs that Clinton opposed.

• Various projects attached to a defense spending bill that Clinton signed because it contained funds for U.S. troops in Bosnia; $70 million in what Clinton deemed "wasteful spending" in a separate military-construction bill.

• Some $1.1 billion for 14 dam and other construction projects that were part of a 1995 spending bill on energy and water development.

Congressional sponsors and Clinton portrayed the line-item veto as an important tool for presidential control over spending, allowing him to strike down "pork-barrel" projects.

But Stanley E. Collender, a budget expert at Price Waterhouse, an accounting firm, doubts that the measure will have much overall impact on reducing federal deficits.

Instead, he said, it simply shifts power to the White House and allows a president to "use it as a hammer over Congress' head."

"The president will be in a position to trade projects for votes," Collender said, suggesting that a president could threaten to veto a specific project — say a dam or federal building — if the member of Congress from that state or district didn't vote a certain way.

Forty-three states give their governors such line-item veto powers. As Arkansas governor for 12 years, Clinton had it, even though he exercised it rarely.

But critics say the issues are different on the national level.

"You don't have in the states the same extent of the separation of powers that is so critical to national government," said Gary Bass, executive director of OMB Watch, a citizens' group that monitors budget issues. "I think it's a mistake to give the president so much power."

Congress did vote to require the act to be renewed after eight years — giving lawmakers another shot if they decide they've given up too much authority.

"The one thing we should not do is elect a vindictive president," Dole said as the Senate passed the measure on Wednesday. "I don't think the present occupant is or the one challenging the president is, so we'll be safe for the next four years, and probably eight."

Line-item veto

The Senate passed line-item veto legislation Wednesday that would allow the president to strip individual items without having to veto the entire bill and put at risk projects and programs he supports.

Highlights of the legislation

■ The president could cancel funds appropriated by Congress for individual programs or projects.

■ He can also eliminate tax benefits targeted to groups of 100 or fewer beneficiaries.

■ He can also cut out spending on new entitlement programs and any additions to the food stamp program.

■ The bill has an eight-year lifetime, giving Congress a chance to reconsider it if the balance of power has tipped too much toward the executive branch.

■ Congress would have 30 days to decide which vetoed items it wants to restore, a two-thirds vote is needed to overturn a presidential veto of Congress' attempt to restore deleted funding.

Analysis

Texas joins tobacco suit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state of Texas sued the nation's largest tobacco companies Thursday, accusing them of illegal conduct and saying it wants to recoup the cost of treating tobacco-related illnesses.

The lawsuit, announced by Attorney General Dan Morales, seeks more than $4 billion in restitution from the tobacco industry for health care costs for Texans who receive treatment for tobacco-related illnesses under Medicaid from 1980 to 1996.

CDC: Recalled cigarettes are OK

ATLANTA (AP) — There was nothing wrong with the 8 billion cigarettes recalled last year by Philip Morris that isn't wrong with all cigarettes, government health investigators said Thursday.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention investigated more than 70 complaints from people in 27 states who said they became ill after smoking the cigarettes. They complained of coughing, wheezing, watery eyes and nose and throat irritation.

The cigarettes contained nothing out of the ordinary, said Michael Ericksen, director of the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

"The single greatest cause of death in this country is lighting organic material and sucking it into your lungs," Ericksen said.

Helms

Perry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States would consider nuclear retaliation if attacked with chemical weapons, Defense Secretary William J. Perry said Thursday.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Perry twice referred to the U.S. nuclear arsenal's potential role in a devastating response he said a nation attacking with chemical weapons could expect.

Perry testified to further the administration campaign to win Senate approval of a treaty to ban worldwide production and use of chemical weapons.

So far, the international treaty has been ratified by 49 countries, 18 short of the number required to put its ban on production, transfer and use of chemical weapons into effect.

The committee chairman, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., repeated to Perry his position that the treaty could not be enforced because it was unverifiable. "Nor do I believe it stands a chance of accomplishing reductions in the arsenals of countries hostile to the United States," he said.

In fact, Helms said, Russia has signaled it does not intend to get rid of its chemical weapons. Moscow has refused "to come clean" about the size of its arsenal, Helms said, despite a disclosure agreement with the United States in 1988 and another accord in 1990 under which both sides promised to scrap all but 5,000 tons.

Troubling, too, Helms said, is that five of the 16 countries suspected of holding chemical weapons — Libya, Syria, Iraq, Egypt and North Korea — are not among the 160 that have signed the treaty. "Moreover, not one country outside of Europe that has ever had an offensive chemical weapons program has ratified this convention," the chairman said. "Not one."

As a group of Russian legislators looked on, Perry acknowledged some Russian commanders want to retain chemical weapons. In fact, the defense secretary said, "it is entirely possible they may not ratify it," mostly because of the cost of implementing the treaty.

But Perry, Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, urged the Senate in a statement read for them by Lt. Gen. Wesley Clark to ratify the treaty.

To try and allay Helms' difficulties with the treaty, they employed a range of arguments including that it requires trade embargoes be imposed against countries that refuse to rid themselves of chemical weapons.

Talks set on longer mission in Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its European allies will soon begin a debate on whether to extend the troop deployment in Bosnia beyond the end of the year, NATO's commander told lawmakers Thursday.

Gen. George Joulwan, a four-star U.S. Army general who commands NATO forces in Europe, said that as of now, NATO and Clinton administration policy is to end the deployment by Dec. 20.

By mid-April, Joulwan told the House National Security Committee, NATO policy makers will begin discussions about whether some allied forces will need to remain in Bosnia.

But first, IFOR, the NATO peace implementation force, must concentrate on its military mission, he said. The key date is "D-plus 120," four months after the signing of the Dayton peace accords, when IFOR expects to escort remaining warring forces into containment areas.

"Eighty percent of the roads in Bosnia have been opened up by IFOR. We hope to have 100 percent by D-plus 120, by about April 18. That is our goal," Joulwan said. "Then we will do an assessment to say where to go from there. That will determine what sort of force, if any, we will have after a year."

U.S. to promote Bosnia, Croatia investment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Ron Brown will lead a U.S. delegation to Bosnia and Croatia next week to introduce American business executives to the opportunities in the region's $5.1 billion reconstruction program.

Brown announced Thursday he will be accompanied by 12 chief executive officers from the infrastructure, tourism and telecommunications sectors on the Wednesday-Friday trip.

Brown said the meetings with government officials from both nations will center on U.S. private sector involvement in numerous infrastructure and reconstruction projects designed to bring economic stability to the region.

With courts out of picture, states can take on gambling

The long battle to keep casinos out of Idaho is not yet won. But the U.S. Supreme Court gave welcome aid to the defenders this week.

The court ruled that Congress cannot force states into federal court to settle disputes over gambling on Indian reservations. This is an immensely complicated ruling. But in simplest terms, it means that Idaho and other states will have more control over their destinies.

States and tribes have wrangled nonstop over casinos since the late 1980s, when the court ruled that states which allow any gambling within their borders have to allow it on Indian reservations, too.

That ruling (and subsequent federal legislation) led to the assertion that the existence of a state lottery gave the state no choice but to allow full-blown casinos on reservations. That prospect put a scare into Idaho. Though citizens voted to block casinos in 1992, the issue remains very much undecided.

This week's court decision gives important help to Idaho and other states. By federal law, states have to negotiate with tribes over what kind of reservation gambling they will allow. When tribes don't get what they want, they've been suing states for failing to bargain "in good faith."

The Supreme Court's decision puts a stop to those suits. It likewise may put a stop to future attempts by Congress to bend states to the federal government's will.

The ruling basically says that the U.S. Constitution's 11th Amendment – which protects states against lawsuits in federal court – really means what it says. That's a significant victory for states' rights; no one can fully predict how many issues it ultimately may affect.

The 11th Amendment

"The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state."

It also is a significant victory for those of us who want to protect our home state. Although Indian tribes regard gambling as a splendid economic opportunity, Idaho leaders (and voters) have perceived it as an agent of social decay.

Gambling in various forms is spreading throughout America these days, partly because state-sanctioned lotteries have reduced its stigma. But its growing acceptance doesn't change gambling's undeniable links to crime, political corruption and the devastation of countless lives.

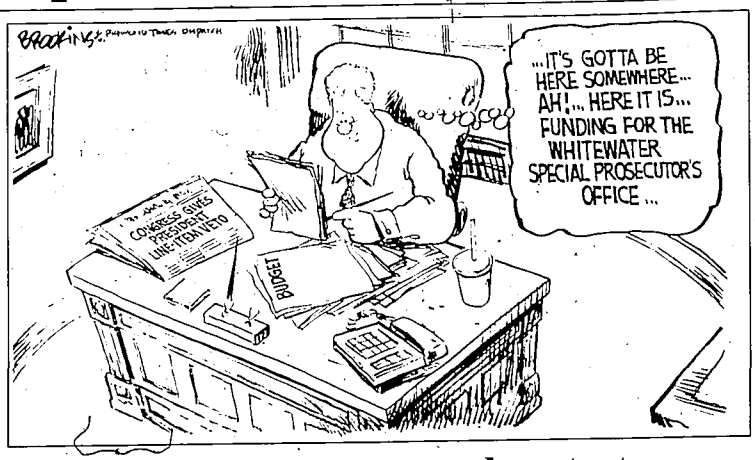

States such as Idaho shouldn't be forced to welcome such a destructive social force within their borders. Concern for fairness to Indian tribes shouldn't require enforced moral erosion for the rest of us.

Experience counts as much as test scores

Molly Ivins

Since the 5th Circuit has just thrown out affirmative action lock, stock and non-quotas, the University of Texas Law School, the suee in this case (there's harmonic convergence in there somewhere) now has a skunk in the well the size of Willy the Whale.

You might think there's some legal fizzy-whingle that would allow the law school and the university as a whole to skip gaily around this decision until it hits the Supreme Court with all deliberate speed, but according to Law School Dean Michael Sharlot, no such luck. They're under a non-injunction injunction, complete with punitive damages for disobeying.

All well and good, say our conservative brethren, nor should it be. Race, used for so long to keep people of the non-white persuasion out of law schools and everything else in this country, cannot be even a small factor in whether they now get in.

Before total panic sets in among the coaching staffs, let me hasten to relay the gladsome tidings that the 5th's decision specifically includes "the ability to make a downfield tackle" as among the criteria that may properly be considered in admissions decisions. Thank heaven, athletic recruiting will not be affected.

The 5th's list of those qualities that may be considered in admissions decisions is worthy of long study; in addition to the downfield tackle, "socio-economic status, the ability to play cello or understand chaos theory and the condition of being the child of an alumnus" may all properly be considered, according to the court. Hmmmm.

You might think that "socio-economic status" would give minority citizens some edge, but unfortunately, there are more poor whites than other flavors in our great nation. Individual merit is always a tempting substitute for "socio-economic status," but whence cometh whether the candidate is "the child of an alumnus"? Hereditary Elite City!

How do you judge individual merit? If a white kid with rich parents who went to the best prep schools makes exactly the same score on the college boards as a black kid from the inner city who went to rotten schools, which kid do we think is natively smarter and which one has more grit, determination and gumption?

The long-term implications of this decision are just as serious as a stroke. No American institution outside the military is what anyone could call well-integrated. After 30 years of affirmative action in varying degrees, all we can say is that we're doing better than we were before affirmative action.

But think what another 30 years of giving preference to "the child of an alumnus" will do to the legal profession and, more specifically, the bench. A world full of white judges who all had rich daddies and went to prep school is going to have a wonderful time dealing with inner-city kids who may or may not be salvageable. What on Earth makes anyone think that life experience isn't as important as test scores?

I always preferred Lyndon B. Johnson's brand of affirmative action – in which schools are ordered to look harder for qualified minority candidates – to the Richard Nixon school of numerical quotas. The UT Law School, under the direction of Shurlot (one of the most principled conservatives I know), seemed to me to have an excellent system. The pool of qualified candidates was set by a combination of grades and test scores; within that qualified pool, they could skip around factoring in individual merit, diversity of background, child of alum, cello and whatever else seemed relevant.

Letters

Why tolerate hurtful behavior?

Concerning the letter from Echo Dalos last Sunday:

Many people are "ex-gays"; an African-American cannot become an "ex-black" – behavior cannot be compared to race. Behavior is not genetic.

The homosexual movement, interested in recruiting, at the 1993 March on Washington demanded the repeal of sodomy laws, passage and implementation of graduated age of consent laws, and lesbian and gay study programs at all levels of education.

For the last six years, child sexual abuse among homosexuals and bisexuals accounted for 47 percent of the stories and 63 percent of the child victims reported on the Internet's sample of the nation's 25 largest newspapers. These figures are consistent with past reviews of the scientific literature, indicating that the nearly 3 percent of the population that is homosexual is much more likely to molest children. Given how small the homosexual subculture is, it's striking that homosexual molestations accounted for more than 50 percent of all the reports.

Homosexuals have equal rights. There is a campaign for minority status based on homosexual behavior. The "gay civil rights bill" seeks to have homosexuals included as a minority under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and would consequently include them in affirmative action quotas under the Presidential Executive order 11246.

Being tolerant never meant condoning a dangerous lifestyle to influence others. The average homosexual male lives to age 40, the average lesbian, age 45. How can a society condemn smoking but give this lifestyle an A-OK? The new tolerance is no longer a virtue but a vice.

In Romans 1, God speaks of those who "professing to be wise, become fools ... for they exchanged the truth for a lie ... (and) for this reason God gave them over to degrading passions for their women exchanged the natural function for that which is unnatural, and in the same way the men abandoned the natural function of the woman and burned in their desire toward one another, men with men committing indecent acts ..."

Why would God be so cruel to create anyone to have a sexual desire for the same sex and then declare it "unnatural, degrading, a lie and indecent?" He would not. You cannot call on Christianity to affirm homosexual behavior. Just as Christian churches do not tolerate pornography, substance abuse, prostitution, adultery, etc., because these choices hurt people, Christianity also opposes homosexuality. It's not the person, it's the behavior.

Name changes can get out of hand

Since we're now in a changing mood, I have a few ideas of changes that we in Twin Falls County should make.

We'll decide to curtail any further development at the Crossroads Ranch because the area looks better if left natural.

We'll rename the Burley Regatta to the Magic Valley Regatta and move it to Hagerman. We'll proclaim the Magic Valley Regional Airport to be the Gateway to the Magic Valley Regatta.

Wagon Days in Ketchum occur too closely in time to the newly renamed Magic Valley Fair and Rodeo in Filer. We'll reschedule them for the second Tuesday in March each year.

When the Twin Falls city and county commissioners finally decide to have their much-needed lobotomies, we'll encourage them to have them done at one of the newly renamed area hospitals, the Twin-Bur Hospital in Burley or the Good-Twin Hospital in Gooding.

Well, enough of this. I'm going down to see the newly renamed Magic Valley Fossil Beds that are somewhere between Buhl and Bliss.

Improve government: Speak out

Your editorial of March 27, "Officials everywhere can learn from airport flap," was right on target. However, you should have expanded on your idea. It is true that all public officials and public employees must always be sensitive to citizens' opinions. It is also very important for public officials to listen to each and every person's concerns and actually hear what was said.

Elected people usually hold office because they happened to have won a popularity contest at some level. A victory in an election does not give that official unlimited wisdom or an ability to better see into the future. Being an elected official certainly comes with many responsibilities and a quite large Achilles heel.

As we all know, being a citizen of the United States also comes with many responsibilities. Some are asked to serve our country on foreign soil and, in some cases, lay down their lives to defend our way of life.

One of the easiest things a citizen can do is voice their opinions on all issues confronting elected officials; perhaps calling that an easy thing is not strong enough, it should be called a duty, responsibility or requirement of being a United States citizen.

Like many, I have enjoyed some of the humor involved in the naming of an airport, but I have also been involved on the other side in budget hearings, including millions of dollars when not one person showed up. There have been many meetings where extremely important issues were discussed and again no one took the time to be involved or didn't think their opinion counted.

Preserve Idaho's environment

Idaho's congressional delegation has the good fortune to represent a state with a relatively unspoiled environment. This makes its participation in the current assault on the environment in Washington all the more perplexing.

For example, protecting our water from contamination by poisons and pollutants is an obvious priority. Yet amazingly, Rep. Crapo voted to gut major provisions of the Clean Water Act of 1972, a law which has reversed the deteriorating quality of America's water supplies. Does Idaho no longer need laws to protect our rivers, lakes and streams? Let's take a look.

The Coeur d'Alene Basin has suffered massive pollution from mining operations, leaving the river and lake contaminated by heavy metals such as lead and cadmium. Over the years, miners dumped 72 million tons of mine tailings in the waterways.

The Middle Snake River, as we all know, has been significantly damaged by pollutants from agricultural runoff, aquaculture, urban sewage discharges and reduced flow.

A 1992 study of groundwater in southern Idaho found that 37 of 401 wells were contaminated with at least one chemical; the list included organic solvents, arsenic, heavy metals and pesticides.

The Idaho Division of Environmental Quality, under court order, has until May 1998 to finalize a plan to clean up 962 streams in the state designated as degraded.

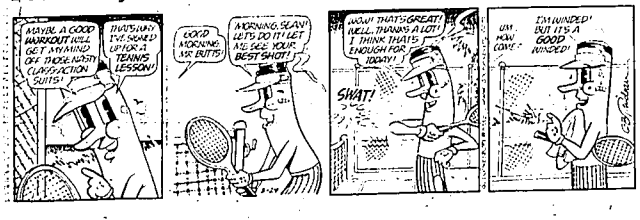

The aquifer that supplies Pocatello's drinking water has been contaminated by trichloroethylene solvent which was dumped in a landfill before strict disposal laws were enacted. The technology to remove the solvent may cost taxpayers as much as $900,000.

Sen. Craig voted in favor of setting aside environmental regulations which protect watersheds from damaging road building and deforestation to allow "salvage logging" in our national forests. This winter, the Clearwater and Panhandle National Forests were devastated by hundreds of mudslides filling streambeds with silt and destroying Chinook salmon spawning grounds. Indiscriminate logging makes steep mountain sides susceptible to slides.

Idaho's environment is the envy of tourists and a source of pride to natives; we are ill-served by representatives who fail to protect our most precious resources. Let's let them know that we will not allow a return to the "bad old days."

5 Americans killed in Indian bus crash

NEW DELHI, India — A bus carrying a U.S. university tour group rolled into a ditch on the way to the Taj Mahal Thursday, killing five Americans, the U.S. Embassy said.

The embassy said four students were hospitalized. A newspaper said at least 18 students were injured but the report could not be immediately confirmed.

The dead students were identified as Cherese Laulhere of Long Beach, Calif.; Jennifer Druck, of Del Mar, Calif.; Sarah Schewe of Amherst, Mass.; and Virginia Amato of Metairie, La.

Service identified the fifth victim as John Wilson, of Pittsburgh, the husband of an educator at the University of Pittsburgh.

The bus overturned in the ditch as it was trying to pass another vehicle. The Indian bus driver and a tour guide also were killed in the accident in northern India.

Hillary Clinton urges religious tolerance

ISTANBUL, Turkey — Visiting a crossroad of world religions, Hillary Rodham Clinton urged people of all faiths Thursday to be more tolerant and "stand against those who would use and misuse religion."

With symbols and words, the first lady tried to bridge the gaps between religious groups in this mostly Muslim country with ancient ties to Christianity.

Gathering heads of Christian, Muslim and Jewish churches into one stuffy room, Mrs. Clinton said she came "on behalf of peace and tolerance and respect among all people."

Firm plans European high-speed train

MOSCOW — A Swedish-Swiss company is planning to construct a high-speed passenger railroad from Berlin to Moscow.

Eberhard von Koerber, an official of Asea Brown Boveri, told a news conference Thursday that the project has the support of Russian President Boris Yeltsin, the European Union and the World Bank.

According to von Koerber, trains would run at 100 mph, at least halving the 30 hours it now takes to make the 1,160-mile trip.

Reports: Floods kill at least 14 in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran — At least 14 people have been killed and three injured in recent days by floods in several provinces, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported Thursday.

The floods, caused by heavy rain, killed 13 people in the southwestern province of Khuzestan, and one person in Saveh in central Iran, the agency reported.

Also in Khuzestan, 34 villages were flooded when the Jarahi, Karkhe and Karoun rivers burst their banks, IRNA said.

U.S. aid worker found dead in Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam — An American who was helping to raise housing funds for handicapped and orphaned Vietnamese was found dead in his hotel room, his Vietnamese hosts said Thursday. The cause of death was unknown.

Jeffrey Huch, 37, of Santa Cruz, California, was director of a U.S. aid group, the National Committee for Vietnam Friendship Village, that works with the Vietnamese Veterans Association to build housing for the needy near Hanoi.

He had arrived Sunday for meetings with the association, according to association official Huynh Van Trinh.

Pope: Church needs 'new feminism' idea

John Paul II

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The pope says the Roman Catholic Church is in need of a woman's touch.

The question remains: How far will the reach extend?

Pope John Paul II etched deeper Thursday the dual identity of Catholic women: blocked from power but hailed as powerful agents to shape and revitalize the faith.

In a document examining religious life, the pope endorsed "providing room for women to participate ... at all levels," including having a greater hand in training priests and setting church agendas.

Some theologians also note that the papal letter seems to reinforce the general limits on what the Vatican considers essential roles for nuns and other women in the sphere of social and family issues.

"Women occupy a place, in thought and action, which is unique and decisive," the pope wrote.

Local Fox station switches to KXTF

TWIN FALLS — You can call it Channel 6, or Channel 35, but please don't call it KKVI anymore.

The Federal Communications Commission has approved a name change for Twin Falls' Fox affiliate, to KXTF.

The station's owner, Sunbelt Communications of Las Vegas, petitioned the federal agency for the change, according to KXTF station manager Dick McMahon.

"There's a trend now to identify affiliate stations with their networks," he said. "That's why the 'X' — for Fox."

KKVI's call letters are also similar to Nampa's KIVI, an ABC affiliate whose signal can be picked up in much of the Magic and Wood River valleys, and Pocatello's KPVI, a NBC affiliate. All three stations once belonged to the same company; KIVI now has different ownership.

Three of the six council seats are up for election with three official candidates.

Incumbents Joanna Ehrmantraut and Roger Fry will try again for re-election to the two-year alderman positions.

Newcomer Melissa Williams is seeking election to the position vacated by long-time city official Wayne Douthit who is taking a break after 15 years of public service.

Bellevue residents may cast their votes Monday between noon and 8 p.m. at City Hall. Residents have the option of casting a vote for write-in candidates in this uncontested election, said city clerk Anna Faye O'Donnell.

Transportation Department begins work on Highway 93

RIGBY – A project to reconstruct U.S. Highway 93 from the Blaine County line to a point about six miles west of Craters of the Moon Visitors Center began this week, the Idaho Department of Transportation announced Wednesday.

Crews will realign the roadway to straighten existing curves on the 1.4-mile stretch and add a truck-climbing lane on Tomcat Hill. New asphalt pavement and guardrail also will be added.

Motorists may experience delays of up to 15 minutes. Work will be completed by August.

Agency develops program to help people buy houses

TWIN FALLS – The Rural Economic and Community Development agency – formerly known as Farmers Home Administration – has a program to help some low-income people buy houses.

Funding for the loans, which have low monthly payments, is now more readily available in targeted counties. Those counties include Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls, except the city of Twin Falls.

Eligibility requirements include a good credit history and dependable income.

For more information, call 436-0116 or 886-2256.

Road condition reports will end as warm weather stays

BOISE – The statewide winter road-condition reporting service will end Sunday, with the final update given at 3 p.m. Saturday.

"The report is ending because warmer weather has created generally good driving conditions on the state highway system," said Idaho Transportation Department spokesman Jeff Stratten. "However, if a storm hits or any hazardous driving conditions occur, the service will be resumed."

From late October or early November to late March or early April, the report is updated four times a day. Road-condition updates have been given just twice daily since March 18.

Knievel prepares a jump plan

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Motorcycle stunt jumper Robbie Knievel would dearly love to do what his dad never did – jump the Snake River Canyon – but he's got to clear a few hurdles before he gets the chance.

"They've talked to us about jumping and we said we didn't have any problems with it, depending on how it's set up," said Tim Qualls, who owns the land where Knievel's dad, Evel, launched his unsuccessful jump in 1974.

Though Qualls has agreed in principle, no detailed negotiations have taken place and no deal is signed, he said.

Last month, local government officials from both sides of the river met with the younger Knievel to discuss the idea of another jump. The meeting was held at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Dennis Maughan, who attended the Feb. 16 meeting, said Thursday that Knievel's entourage was going to assemble a "comprehensive plan" for the event.

The plan will focus on liability insurance, security and crowd control, Maughan said, "because we told them neither the city, nor the county, is interested in providing those services."

The leap won't happen this year because the Robbie Knievel has too many other commitments, Maughan said. Knievel's promoters need time to line up television contracts and product endorsements, Maughan said, so the jump appears to be at least one year away.

Another man who attended the Feb. 16 meeting was Howard Kestie, Gooding-based area supervisor for the Idaho Department of Lands. Kestie said his department is prepared to issue a temporary use permit for Knievel to touch down on state land on the north side of the canyon.

"It's pretty routine," Kestie said of the state permit, "but we might reconsider if there's a real public outcry against it."

Local officials are interested in the idea of a second Knievel leap, said Kent Just, the chamber's executive director. "We're not courting anybody. We're just providing information," Just said.

While they'd like to see another jump, local officials aren't interested in other aspects of the senior Knievel's ill-starred attempt in 1974. The jump was marred by extensive property damage, thousands of dollars in unpaid bills, and the antics of drunken motorcycle gangs.

Robbie Knievel and his agent, Ward Planche of Louisville, Ky., "know exactly what happened last time around and they have no intention of trying to replicate anything like that," Just said.

At this point, the ball is in Knievel's court, Just said, "but there's been no decision from those folks if they're really going to do it."

"They don't know exactly how they'd do it, they just know they want to do it."

The Times-News

RICHFIELD – Richfield School teacher Sandra Lynn Calkins – who teaches fourth, fifth and sixth grade science – was given a Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching.

"She's just an outstanding teacher," said Richfield Superintendent Larry Tinker, who nominated Calkins. "I think she establishes the groundwork for our students to tune into our science program."

A Richfield teacher for about 17 years, Calkins was out of town Thursday. She also teaches other fourth-grade subjects and has a master's degree in science.

Presidential award winners each receive a $7,500 stipend to improve science and mathematics at their schools. They will be honored at a Washington, D.C., ceremony in May.

Three other Idahoans won awards from the more than 100 who were entered in the first round of judging. Twelve names were submitted to national headquarters.

The award program was started in 1983 by the White House and is sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

In 1993, Calkins was selected by the National Aeronautics and Space Association as a Teacher Workshop Award winner. With that award, she got a two-week, all expense-paid workshop at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

Calkins also has been a presenter at the National Science Foundation's annual conference, Tinker said.

Man will go on trial for killing

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – A judge bound over a Twin Falls man Thursday on a first-degree murder charge in connection with the death of 18-year-old Ryan Wiggins of Castleford.

Rudy Trevino III, 22, will enter his plea to the charge in 5th District Court, but no date has yet been set. Fifth District Judge William Hart determined there was sufficient evidence to try Trevino on the charge following a three-day preliminary hearing that ended Monday.

During the hearing, witnesses testified that Trevino shot Wiggins in the chest outside the Circle K convenience store on Orchard Street on May 14, 1995. Adan Tito Cantu, 21, Trevino's friend, testified he fought with Wiggins just before Trevino shot him. Another witness, Larry Curtis, Wiggins' friend, identified Trevino as the killer, but had trouble making the identification on his first attempt.

Jerome council OKs water rate increase

By Rob Lundgren
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – The City Council voted Wednesday evening to raise water rates, while postponing efforts to pass a bond issue for water system repairs.

But before the proposed rates can be adopted as an ordinance, the public will have opportunities to comment at hearings during City Council meetings on April 2, April 16 and May 7.

During a special work session Wednesday, Councilman Dennis Moore suggested separating the issues of a rate increase to meet immediate needs and a bond issue to pay for costly improvements that can be pursued later.

Each water user would be charged a base rate of $4.30, within the city limits, and twice that rate – $8.60 – for water users outside the city limits. The rate for water use would be at a fixed rate of 57 cents per 100 cubic feet, regardless of the amount used.

The motion passed unanimously.

Businesses and people who use a lot of water would be the only ones to see a significant increase in their water bills, city Administrator Jeff Bishop said.

People who use no more than 2,000 cubic feet per month would see virtually no change in their water bill. But summer water rates would increase by about $13 per month for 4,000 cubic feet, or a $31 increase for heavy use at 10,000 cubic feet.

More than 70 percent of the city's water users require less than 2,000 cubic feet per month during the year, while summer consumption for most residents averages less than 4,000 cubic feet per month, Bishop said.

As Jerome's largest water user, Jerome Cheese Co. Inc. would pay more than twice what it's paying now under the new rates.

"I don't have a problem with the proposed increase," Manager Jon Davis in a later interview. "I wish the increase wasn't so drastic, but we'll pay our share."

Jerome Cheese averages 1.16 million cubic feet per month. The company pays about $3,500 per month for water. The city's proposed new rate structure would raise the water bill to about $7,200, an increase of $3,700, Davis said.

The city has provided water to businesses and area residents for many years at less than what it costs the city to produce and deliver it.

"The problem was here before we came to Jerome," Davis said. "Now we're going to help solve the problem. We'll help shoulder the blame."

1st test delayed 10 months at waste treatment site

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A contractor says the first waste treatment test at a contaminated Idaho National Engineering Laboratory site will be 10 months later than originally planned.

Lockheed Environmental Systems and Technology said the first test at Pit 9 now is scheduled for June, 1997. Pit 9 is a landfill that contains plutonium-tainted scraps from the Rocky Flats weapons plant and radioactive and organic contaminants from INEL operations.

Despite the delay, caused by the state's objection to the company's design work and regulatory planning, construction crews are well on their way to finishing the buried-waste retrieval plant and a treatment and storage center.

Stung by state criticism for missed planning deadlines, site officials brought reporters to the pit this week to show them that they're working hard on the project.

Chenoweth denounces line-item veto provision, then votes for it

The Associated Press

Chenoweth

After embracing the Republican "Contract with America" during her 1994 campaign, Idaho Congressman Helen Chenoweth Thursday denounced the contract's line-item veto provision then turned around and voted for it.

"I must vote against this measure today because I simply cannot support what would be a monumental mistake that would be made by this Congress if we hand over legislative powers to the president in the form of a Line Item Veto," Chenoweth said in a statement sent to Idaho media.

But less than an hour later, Chenoweth was among 232 House members who supported the line item veto in the key vote that immediately sent the House-Senate compromise on that issue to President Clinton.

While Thursday vote and rhetoric contradicted each other, the vote agreed with the stand Chenoweth took six weeks before the 1994 election when she joined 300 other Republicans in Washington to sign the Contract with America.

"I've signed this because the people of Idaho's First District are fed up with the way Congress has been run under Democratic control," Chenoweth said in a statement issued on Sept. 27, 1994. "The Contract with America is a pledge to the American people for producing a line item veto, term limits and other reforms for which the public's demands have fallen upon deaf Democrat ears."

Following Thursday's vote, however, Chenoweth declined to explain the change of heart on the issue beyond saying that the Contract with America was only a promise to bring issues to a vote — not a promise to pass them. She also said that since taking her seat in Congress she has consistently opposed the line item veto. She said she could discuss the statement issued by her campaign further until she had the complete text before her.

The unusual parliamentary maneuver that sent the line item veto to the president on Thursday involved adoption of the rule governing consideration of unrelated legislation raising the amount of debt the federal government can carry.

Chenoweth said she had been told the vote on the rule was only procedural and that the entire package that included both the debt limit and the line-item veto had to pass to advance the line-item veto.

But Republican Congressman Doc Hastings of Washington, who was presiding over the House during the debate, told members the House-Senate compromise on the line item veto was approved when the rule was adopted and the vote on the debt limit had no effect on that compromise. In response to questions, Hastings said the retaining the line item veto provisions in the debt limit bill with some modification from the compromise would only have the effect of send Clinton two measures should the Senate also agree with the second.

In her statement Thursday Chenoweth said that the "Constitution specifically gives the power of the purse to the people, which are represented in the Congress. ... I strongly believe that the Congress will regret the day that we surrender our tremendous power to the executive."

Prosecutors call experts to stand

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Prosecutors hope testimony from state crime lab experts will link physical evidence to Ron Lafferty, the self-proclaimed prophet being retried for the 1984 slayings of his sister-in-law and her infant daughter.

The experts were expected to take the witness stand in 4th District Court late Thursday, the fourth day of Lafferty's capital homicide trial in the deaths of Brenda Wright Lafferty and her baby, Erica.

Brenda Wright Lafferty was a native of Kimberly.

On Wednesday, police officers testified that they seized a sawed-off shotgun, pocket knife and notebook full of writings from Lafferty's Impala station wagon after it was found July 30, 1984, in Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Charles Carnes and Richard Knapp, two drifters traveling with the Laffertys, drove the car to Wyoming after leaving the brothers in Wendover, Nev., a few days earlier, prosecutors say.

An FBI agent testified that he recovered a towel and knife along I-80 about 22 miles west of Wendover. Carnes said earlier that he threw the towel and knife out of Lafferty's car after leaving Wendover.

Two other agents testified about arresting Ron and Dan Lafferty on Aug. 7, 1984, at the Circus Circus Casino in Reno. The agents identified motel receipts and boots the Laffertys were wearing.

The owner of an Orem cutlery store said Ron Lafferty came into his store in the spring of 1984 and traded him a pistol for a few knives. He identified the knife found along I-80 as similar to one he gave Lafferty.

Prosecutors charge the killings were revenge for Brenda encouraging Ron's wife, Diana, to divorce him. They say Ron Lafferty tried to justify the killings by claiming to receive a revelation that ordered Brenda and her daughter "removed."

Joe Waldholtz jailed for contempt of court

Waldholtz

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A judge has jailed Joe Waldholtz, the estranged husband of U.S. Rep. Enid Waldholtz, for failing to return $600,000 his relatives suspect him of stealing.

Allegheny County Judge Robert Kelly held Waldholtz, 35, in contempt of court Thursday. In a court order, he said Waldholtz would have to produce records showing what he did with money he was supposed to be investing for his grandmother, Rebecca Levenson, who is incapacitated by Alzheimer's disease.

The judge also ordered Waldholtz to return any of the money he still has.

Waldholtz told the judge that the records are in his Washington, D.C., home, and that he has been too busy negotiating his divorce from Rep. Waldholtz to provide them.

She filed for divorce on Nov. 14, three days after her husband disappeared as investigators searched for him in connection with an alleged $1.7 million check-kiting scheme and purported illegal financing of her 1994 campaign.

He reappeared six days later. The couple are both under federal criminal investigation.

A judge in Salt Lake City granted the Utah Republican temporary custody of her and Joe Waldholtz's 6-month-old daughter on Monday.

She alleges her husband obtained money from her father under false pretenses, used it to make illegal campaign contributions, invented "ghost contributors" and stole from her campaign funds while he worked as treasurer.

Neither Kelly nor Bill Stang, a lawyer for Waldholtz's family, would accept Waldholtz's claim that he was too busy to explain what happened to Mrs. Levinson's money. Providing the documents should have been easy, Stang said.

Waldholtz could "just make a telephone call to a bank or a stockbroker and say, 'Send the records to my father's house in Pittsburgh,'" Stang said.

Kelly had ordered Waldholtz to turn over the records on Nov. 2, slightly more than five months after Mrs. Levenson was judged to be incapable of handling her affairs last May 26.

Minidoka fair organizers seek to control beer consumption

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT – Disorderly beer drinkers raised a ruckus during last year's Fourth of July celebration, and the Minidoka County commissioners are considering an ordinance to curb any problems that might arise during this year's festivities.

The proposal would restrict beer drinkers to a roped off beer garden area, which would be the only place where beer consumption would be allowed, commission Chairman John Remsberg said.

Commissioners plan to meet with the fair board on April 7 to discuss the proposal.

Beer drinking during the celebration is mostly associated with horse racing and pari-mutuel betting, fair board secretary Judy Parkin said.

Last year drunken horse racing fans started fights and caused chaos at the celebration's carnival after the horse races ended, Parkin said. The fair board wants to promote a family atmosphere, and last year's problems were not conducive to that, she said.

'Last year we had people carrying 12-packs of beer walking through the fairgrounds and going into the carnival.'

— Judy Parkin, fair board secretary

"Last year we had people carrying 12-packs of beer, walking through the fairgrounds and going into the carnival," she said. "There were so many drunks the sheriff's department didn't have enough people to haul all of them away. It wasn't a good situation, especially for people who brought their kids."

Beer is not sold at the county fair, and there have been fewer problems during that celebration, she said. The fair board rents the fair grounds to the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce for the annual Fourth of July Celebration.

Sheriff Paul Fries was not available for comment Thursday. Chief Deputy Bob Vasquez said the proposed ordinance sounds like a good idea, but he didn't recall any serious problems during last year's celebration. He added that Sheriff Fries has expressed support for the ordinance.

Gary Woods, president of Rupert Downs Inc., sponsor of the horse racing events at the celebration, said he is aware of the problems that resulted last year, and he agrees that the beer garden concept is a good idea.

"It was explained to me that beer could be consumed in the race track area but not outside, and it sounds like a good idea. It shouldn't bother the racing end of the celebration at all," he said.

Tests reveal little contamination in water near potato sludge pits

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

PAUL – State water quality tests showed no significant contamination in three drinking water wells near a potato sludge pit north of here, a state official said.

The sludge pits are owned by Magic Valley Foods Inc. of Rupert and have been the topic of a string of complaints related to odor and environmental contamination dating back to the summer of 1994.

The tests revealed an elevated level of nitrates in one of the three wells and two of the wells had elevated levels of fecal coliform bacteria, according to Nick Cizmich, water quality science officer for the state Division of Environmental Quality.

But neither the nitrates, nor the coliforms can be directly linked to the sludge pits, he said.

"Groundwater contamination is a real tough thing to pinpoint," he said. "Nitrate levels are elevated in this area anyway because of farming practices and septic systems. Coliforms are often attributed to feed lot and dairy operations, but they can also be from old or dirty pipes in the house."

The nitrate reading in a well owned by Rex and Alice Osterhout was six parts-per-million. Cizmich said if nitrates go over 10 ppm the water should not be consumed and is out of compliance with safe drinking water standards. DEQ tested only for nitrates and bacteria, he said.

The Osterhouts and another neighbor to the sludge pit, Jodie Wann, say they are glad DEQ is taking notice of the situation. But more should be done.

'We aren't dumping anything toxic, and it's not affecting the groundwater. There are just two families who don't want us there.'

— Bill Schow, vice president, Magic Valley Foods

DEQ officials counter that the state has no specific laws dealing with sludge disposal, and because Magic Valley Foods is using its own property there isn't much the state can do except make suggestions.

But Wann says she won't give up until something is done, and it's time the state passed some legislation that deals with farm odors and groundwater pollution.

"Agriculture can go forward without pollution," she said. "I never was an environmentalist until this company robbed me of my right to clean air, and it's time it was addressed by the legislature."

She added that she has no intention of giving up until a compromise is reached. She is also launching a letter writing campaign to vendors of Magic Valley Foods urging a boycott of the company's products.

Bill Schow, vice president of Magic Valley Foods, said the results of the water tests show that the sludge is not effecting the groundwater, and the company is not doing anything illegal.

"Our property is properly zoned, and although the Osterhouts and Jodie Wann continue to make accusations they are always disproved," Schow said. "We aren't dumping anything toxic, and it's not effecting the groundwater. There are just two families who don't want us there."

Missing girl found in Georgia with her mother

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — A judge agreed to let Michael Grasser take his 5-year-old daughter home to Idaho Thursday, 15 months after she was abducted by his ex-wife.

Grasser, 35, was reunited with the child, Amanda Lee Inez Grasser, shortly before the custody hearing in Forsyth County. Police in neighboring Cherokee County found the girl Tuesday night and arrested her mother, 30-year-old Tamara Bourtai Chapman.

A joyful Grasser said he and Amanda would head home to Boise, Idaho, as soon as possible.

"I told her we were going to go on an airplane ride and she said, 'Oh goody I like airplane rides,'" he said.

Ms. Chapman, who appeared before a magistrate late Wednesday, remained in the Cherokee County jail while fighting extradition to Idaho, where she faces charges of felony interference with child custody and federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

She was arrested in Canton, 34 miles north of Atlanta, after a woman recognized the child's face from a missing-person postcard.

The girl had been missing from her home in Boise since Dec. 3, 1994. Grasser, who was awarded custody of the girl after his divorce from Ms. Chapman, had distributed the postcards through the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Ms. Chapman and her daughter had been living in Cherokee County for about six months, said sheriff's Lt. Jim Harvey. They were accompanied by a man police identified as Kenneth Scott Bell, 30, of Tacoma, Wash.

Man pleads guilty in attempted bombing cases

RENO, Nev. (AP) — One of two men charged in an attempt to bomb the Internal Revenue Service building in Reno pleaded guilty Thursday to all three counts against him, including one carrying a mandatory 30 years in prison.

In exchange for his plea and for Ellis Hurst's agreement to testify against others charged in the case, the government said it would seek leniency at Hurst's sentencing June 20, depending on his level of cooperation.

Hurst pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy, attempted destruction of a government building and use of a explosive device while committing a violent crime.

All three counts carry a maximum of 55 years in prison. The attempted destruction of government property charge alone requires a mandatory sentence of 30 years.

Hurst, 52, and Joseph Bailie, 40, both of Gardnerville, were charged with planting the bomb in December. The device fizzled.

A third Gardnerville man, Jerry Keenan, has been indicted for lying to the grand jury that heard evidence against Bailie and Hurst.

U.S. District Judge Howard McKibben thoroughly questioned Hurst during Thursday's 40-minute hearing to make sure the defendant understood that he was surrendering his constitutional rights.

Hurst generally answered with a terse "Yes, your honor," or "No, your honor."

When the judge asked if Hurst's plea was voluntary and that it would mean "a considerable balance of your life in prison," Hurst replied, "I have a big plate of crow to eat."

In the plea agreement, Hurst said he provided a hand truck used to wheel the bomb into a parking lot at the building on Dec. 17 and the pickup truck used to transport the device to Reno from Gardnerville, 50 miles to the south.

The bomb, contained in a 30-gallon white plastic drum and packed with 100 pounds of explosives, was found the following morning by an IRS employee arriving for work.

Agents with the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the FBI said a fuse had been lit, but the explosion failed because a blasting cap was not strong enough to detonate it.

Condors seen as threat to flights

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Nine California condors are scheduled to be released this summer near the Grand Canyon, and air tour operators are concerned the endangered birds may hamper their flights.

Unlike many endangered species, the nine condors heading for Arizona are deemed "nonessential" and "experimental" as they are introduced into the 1,000-foot-high Vermilion Cliffs, 50 miles north of the canyon.

However, U.S. Air Tour Association President Dan Anderson said problems may arise if something changes with the birds' designation.

"That might be used to increase the amount of space that tour operators can't fly," Anderson said as the Federal Aviation Administration finishes a new set of regulations on where planes can fly over the canyon.

UI flood damage close to $1.1 million

MOSCOW — The damage has been estimated at $1.1 million on the University of Idaho campus from flooding and broken pipes last month.

Mike Sylvester, director of facilities management, said inspectors from the Federal Emergency Management Agency were expected to be on campus through Friday investigating the flood damage.

Pipes broke on campus Feb. 8, flooding a portion of the Kibbie ASUI Activity Center. The new Engineering/Physics Building had a pipe break, causing flooding on its roof.

Park Village Apartments, built in 1957, saw the worst of the damage. The first floor of the complex will remain closed the rest of the semester. Water reached a 3-foot level in the first floor of the apartments, causing extensive damage. Appliances will have to be replaced. Bringing the complex up to code could cost $500,000.

Other high damage areas on campus are Paradise Creek and the campus utility tunnel.

Court: Verbal admission was warranty

BOISE — When the owners of a boat said it was in "good and seaworthy condition," that created a warranty, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Thursday ruled unanimously for William Pitzer and against Donald and Carol Swenson in a Kootenai County case.

Pitzer bought a boat from the Swensons for $24,500, but later found it had dry rot and repairs cost nearly $12,000.

Pitzer won a district court judgment for that amount, plus costs and attorney fees.

The Court of Appeals agreed with the ruling. The court said when the Swensons admitted that the boat was represented as "being in good and seaworthy condition," that created a warranty that the boat was fit for use as a boat.

College board rejects tuition increase

COEUR d'ALENE — For the first time in 14 years, the North Idaho College board of trustees decided not to raise tuition going into the next school year.

Despite a plea for a 5 percent increase in tuition and fees by college President Robert Bennett, board chairman Norm Gissel on Wednesday broke a tie in favor of holding the line.

Administrators proposed raising tuition and fees by $50 a year for in-state students to $1,034, and $92 a year for out-of-state students, making their cost $3,474.

The proposed increase is the highest allowable rate by law. Some of the college's budget is paid through property taxes in Kootenai County.

Man sentenced to 33 years for robbery

MOSCOW — A man jailers say wreaked five months of mayhem in the Latah County Jail has been sentenced to at least 33 years in prison for robbery and assault last fall.

"I've never had a defendant, that to me, is a greater threat to society," said 2nd District Judge John Bengtson, as he ordered Michael Wachholtz, 34, to spend 25 to 30 years in prison for a $109 robbery of a grocery store last October.

Wachholtz, labeled a violent, professional criminal by the prosecution, also was sentenced to 8 to 10 years for aggravated assault stemming from a November attack on a corrections officer during a foiled escape attempt.

Bengtson ordered the sentences served consecutively, meaning Wachholtz will have to serve the 25-year minimum robbery sentence and then earn institutional parole from it before starting to serve the assault sentence.

Judgments entered in securities lawsuit

BOISE — The state Department of Finance says a district judge has entered judgment against a Boise man for entering into fraudulent securities transactions.

Director Gavin Gee said Thursday Steven Everett Coryell of Boise has been ordered to make full restitution of the $345,000 invested with his company.

Fourth District Judge D. Duff McKee also entered a permanent injunction against such activities in the future.

In a civil complaint filed last December, the state alleged that Coryell and his company, National Investigative Consultants Inc., violated anti-fraud and registration provisions of the Idaho Securities Act between 1991 and 1994. The state said the defendants admitted the allegations.

Ski resort management restructured

SANDPOINT — Financial pressures and little time to address them are partly behind a restructuring at Pack River Management, parent company of Schweitzer Mountain Resort near Sandpoint, its officers say.

As part of the shuffle, Chief Executive Officer Bobbie Huguenin stepped down from the post. Those duties will be assumed by Brad Mead, a long-term associate of the company. Huguenin will remain as chairman of the board and as the owners' principal representative.

The company also named Gordon Zimmerman, of Scottsdale, Ariz., as its chief financial officer. All changes take effect April 1.

"It's a case of where we've had a cash shortage and that makes people feel concerned," Huguenin said. "(Bankruptcy) is not in the cards. We have way more assets than liabilities."

Gritz suggests ending Montana siege quickly

Gritz

LEWISTON (AP) — The man who helped bring an end to Idaho's deadly Ruby Ridge siege says federal officers must act quickly if they hope to avoid bloodshed in the Montana freemen standoff.

"Maybe I'm dumb," James "Bo" Gritz said. "But to me, it looks like they (FBI agents) have got a real time problem.

"The longer they wait, the more the people under siege will become resistant and assume a Hole-in-the-Wall-Gang mind-set," said Gritz, whose Center For Action headquarters is in Sandy Valley, Nev.

The reference to outlaw Butch Cassidy's impregnable hideout came as members of the militant freemen group remained holed up on Thursday near Jordan, Mont.

Gritz pointed out that the April 19 anniversary of the fiery 1993 Branch Davidian raid at Waco, Texas, and the 1995 federal building bombing in Oklahoma City was fast approaching.

The former Green Beret colonel credited with helping negotiate an end to the 1992 Randy Weaver standoff in the Idaho Panhandle is developing a constitutional community called "Almost Heaven" near Kamiah.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for another right-wing group in the Kamiah area called the Freemen Patriots publicly distanced his organization from the Montana freemen except on some philosophical some issues.

"We have some sympathy for those guys," Chad Erickson said.

He warned that the Montana standoff may be a government ploy to catch other patriots.

"I think they're after a lot more than the people in the house," Erickson said. "They've set up a trap. I think they're using them for bait."

"Hogwash," Gritz countered.

It's a fiddle not a violin

O'Connor brings his country-flavored act to Twin Falls stage

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Mark O'Connor fiddles around with his music – to the tune of a Grammy Award and a four-year stint as the Country Music Association's Musician of the Year.

It started in Seattle, where O'Connor was born and raised. His mother, a professional dance teacher, wanted everyone in the family to enjoy music. Young Mark started taking guitar lessons at age 5.

When he was 11, he got his first fiddle and, by the time he was in high school, he had recorded four albums and won every major fiddle competition in the country. After high school, he joined a band and took to the road.

"I will be playing both guitar and fiddle in Twin Falls," O'Connor said earlier this month in a phone interview from Nashville, where he teaches at Vanderbilt University. "I'm going to play excerpts from my 'Fiddle Concerto Number 2,' which I just composed."

The concerto's premiere, with orchestra, is set for May 25 in Nashville. O'Connor said he expects "Performance Today" to carry the concert on National Public Radio.

O'Connor is known for combining traditional fiddling and symphonic music. He accomplishes this by playing the styles against each other, with solo violin and orchestra exploring and looking for common ground.

He has taken his music on tour, to major music festivals across the United States and abroad. And he has performed with big names such as James Taylor, Chet Atkins, Paul Simon, Willie Nelson, Randy Travis and Dolly Parton.

His "New Nashville Cats" album won a Grammy Award, and he's planning to bring copies of his current "Fiddle Concerto" CD to the Twin Falls concert.

O'Connor, 34, has a 7-year-old son who will begin taking music lessons this year. Around the house, there is lots of classical music – and lots of fiddling.

"Early in our country's settling, the fiddle was popular because it was everybody's entertainment," O'Connor said, "but the fiddle is probably more popular today than maybe ever before."

O'Connor has done his share to make it so.

Symphony with a twist

Mark O'Connor will perform at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Building auditorium.

Tickets, priced at $10 for adults and $8 for students, are available at Everybody's Business, Larson Arts, The Homestead, Little Red Hen, the CSI Continuing Education Office and the Magic Valley Arts Council office in Twin Falls, at CSI outreach centers in Burley, Gooding and Ketchum, at Arlene's Flowers in Jerome and at Sav-Mor Drug in Buhl. Any tickets left will be sold at the door.

This Arts on Tour concert is made possible, in part, by the Idaho Commission on the Arts and the Western States Arts Federation.

Twin Falls County books Loveless, Ketchum for fair

The Times-News

FILER — Country singing stars Patty Loveless and Hal Ketchum will perform at the Twin Falls County Fair on Sept. 1.

Fair manager John Pitz said Thursday that he had commitments from both artists. Ketchum will open for Loveless in a single show, which will start at 8 p.m. in the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds arena.

Loveless, a 39-year-old Kentuckyian, has been a fixture on the country Top 40 since her breakthrough album, "Patty Loveless," in 1990. She's best known for her 1991 hit, "Timber, I'm Falling in Love," which held the No. 1 spot on the Billboard country charts for a extraordinary three weeks.

Loveless has had 10 top-five hits, a number likely to be expanded by "You Can Feel Bad," currently No. 8 on the Billboard country singles charts.

Ketchum, who opened the Sun Valley Music Festival last June with a concert on the Wood River High School football field in Hailey, is a 42-year-old transplanted New Yorker who learned his songwriting craft in Texas.

He bought a guitar for $30 from a pawnshop, according to "The Insider's Book of Country Music," and wrote songs on it.

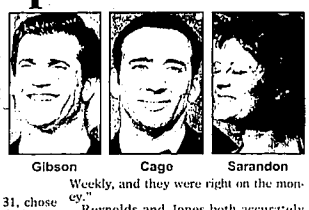

Ketchum is best known for his debut single, "Small Town Saturday Night," the No. 1 country song of 1991, according to Radio & Records.

There will be a second grandstand show at the fair on Sept. 2. That artist has not been booked yet.

Twin Falls women earn top Oscar-picker honors

TWIN FALLS — In a year of surprises, Judy Reynolds and Dawn Jones of Twin Falls proved that their know their Academy Awards.

"I would have gotten them all right," said Reynolds, 42, co-winner of The Times-News Pick-the-Oscar Winners contest. "But I changed my mind at the last minute."

Reynolds and Dawn Jones, 31, chose three out of the five major award-winners correctly, and both got the tie-breaker — selecting Mel Gibson as the best-director winner for "Braveheart." That acumen earned the winners dinner out on The Times-News.

"I don't see a lot of current movies," Jones said. "But I read Entertainment Weekly, and they were right on the money."

Reynolds and Jones both accurately picked "Braveheart," Nicolas Cage of "Leaving Las Vegas" and Susan Sarandon of "Dead Man Walking" as winners of best picture, best actor and best actress awards, respectively. The Oscars were awarded last Monday.

Downtown Twin Falls on the wagon for food drive

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — By any standard, it's not your ordinary rig.

"The wagon comes from an Amish wagon-builder in Iowa, and the horses are Amish too," said Tom Proctor, a Stanley outfitter who'll be offering rides downtown Saturday to benefit St. Vincent DePaul's and the Salvation Army. "The wagon's got brake lights and you can pull the tongue and put a hitch in its place."

Actually, Proctor, who runs Pioneer Mountain Outfitters, is a familiar sight with his wagon in downtown Twin Falls this time of year. The Downtown Business Improvement District has signed him up for a variety of events during the just-passed winter, from the holiday parade in December to wagon rides at Christmas time.

"We bring our horses down out of the high country during the winter," Proctor said. "So this is an opportunity to keep them busy."

Proctor's two horses, which weigh in at 2,340 and 2,260 pounds, respectively, keep busy all summer in the Sawtooth Valley, taking visitors on tours, hauling the wagon in weddings, and giving tourists rides through Stanley.

"Amish teams are almost impossible to get," Proctor said. "I feel real fortunate to have them."

Stanley outfitter Tom Proctor will give wagon rides for anyone donating a non-perishable food item in Saturday's food drive.

Spring food drive

The Twin Falls Downtown Business Improvement District will sponsor a spring food drive Saturday. Wagon rides will be offered to anyone who donates a non-perishable food item.

The pickup and drop-off site will be the old First Security Bnk building, 222 Main Ave. S.

The wagon will run from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., weather permitting.

Proctor's wagon will haul 15-16 passengers at a time in comfort, he said. Visiting glitterati in the Stanley Basin sometimes hire the wagon and its team for special events.

"They earn their keep," he said.

Price of a ticket Saturday will be a non-perishable food item, which will go to St. Vincent's or the Salvation Army and, in turn, to needy families in the Twin Falls area. Cash donations are also welcome.

Oscar

But Reynolds thought Brad Pitt should be the best supporting actor for "12 Monkeys" and that Mare Winningham would be the best supporting actress for "Georgia;" Jones picked Ed Harris of "Apollo 13" and Joan Allen of "Nixon."

The actual supporting-actor awards went to Kevin Spacey for "Unusual Suspects" and Mira Sorvino for "Mighty Aphrodite."

But 4-for-6 was a whole lot better than the rest of the 87 entrants in the contest did. Seventeen of them didn't get any of the major Oscars right.

"There were some surprises," Jones allowed.

Jones, who is a homemaker with a 3-year-old son, may have won because she does her homework. A great fan of old movies, she enjoys classics such as "Gone With the Wind" and "The Quiet Man" on Turner Classic Movies and American Movie Classics — the oldies movie cable TV channels.

"They don't make them like they used to," she said.

Country queen wannabes step up

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — For someone trying to carve a career in country music, the pressure on the second or third album is extraordinary.

You only get so many chances before record company executives sense an air of failure, and there's always a fresh crop of newcomers.

The superstars take their shots in the fall, hoping to dominate Christmas sales. The beginning of the year brings releases from those still trying to break through. "The vision thing," as George Bush put it, is usually where newer artists fail — either because they can't chart their own course, or because everything takes a back seat to producing a hit single.

In the past few years, female artists have proven successful at walking the tightrope of hit-making while maintaining some sense of identity. Faith Hill, Shania Twain, Wynonna Judd are all examples of unmistakable artists who broke through.

So this year's crop of female country star wannabes is worth a good close look. The one or two who manage to get hits while keeping their integrity have a chance to win some career longevity. The others will have to scramble in 1997.

Chely Wright, "Right in the Middle of It" (Polydor): Recognized as a talent to watch by the Academy of Country Music last year, Wright has all the tools: a great voice, looks and charisma. She's also determined, so determined that it's probably best she didn't choose a career in which she could hurt someone.

The strongest stuff on "Right in the Middle of It" are Wright's bravura ballads like "The Love That We Lost" and "The Other Woman" and most spectacularly "What I Learned From Loving You."

Uptempo selections like "Listenin' to the Radio" (where the chorus borrows from Bruce Springsteen's "Pink Cadillac") are fine and radio-ready.

But you can listen to this whole CD and the only thing you'll learn about Wright is that she'd really, really like to have a hit. The title cut sounds like the smash she's looking for, but here's hoping next time there's room for more of Chely Wright on her own album.

Commercially: could work. Artistically: still promising, but not there yet.

Big Mac sings a duet with Davis on "If I Could Live Your Life," and on selections like "Walk Away," "Love Story in the Making," "Cast Iron Heart" and "She Doesn't Ask," Davis comes dangerously close to coming off as a McEntire clone.

One other thing: Davis does a good job on "Neither One of Us," but it's best not to set yourself up for comparison to a master like Gladys Knight.

The talented Davis has been struggling since the early 1980s. That seasoning, in addition to support from McEntire's Starstruck company and the very prosperous Arista, explains why "Some Things Are Meant to Be" is the closest thing to a sure thing among these six entries.

Rhonda Vincent, "Trouble Free" (Giant): A ringer from the bluegrass scene, Vincent makes it look easy. Even cameos from Alison Krauss, Randy Travis and Dolly Parton fail to take the focus away from her easy-going charm.

"What More Do You Want From Me" recalls the hit Midwestern country sound Martina McBride has cultivated. But the real accomplishment of Vincent and producer James Stroud is adapting her bluegrass strengths for mainstream country music. This is a delight from start to finish, though it clocks in at just over half an hour.

It remains to be seen if Vincent is up to the other tasks of country music stardom, but she already has arrived as a fully formed, unique and delightful musical presence. Highly recommended.

Commercially: gangbusters if it gets a break. Artistically: solid as a rock.

Bobbie Cryner, "Girl of Your Dreams" (MCA): Cryner has a catch in her throaty alto that'll break your heart, and she's one good songwriter to boot.

Nashville notes

The picture she paints of a woman putting on a happy front in "Vision of Loneliness" will break your heart, and her portrait of an unhappy marriage in "You'd Think He'd Know Me Better" will also break your heart.

Sense a theme here? Heartbreak isn't the only emotion Cryner addresses on "Girl of Your Dreams," but it dominates the half of the album she had a hand in writing.

This is an album of dignified beauty and uncompromising depth, which perversely may work against it in a world where "Bigger Than the Beatles" becomes a No. 1 hit. What a heartbreaker it would be if this one was neglected.

Commercially: uphill struggle. Artistically: a major artist right now.

Stephanie Bentley, "Hopechest" (Epic): The sweet-voiced Bentley has been carefully groomed for stardom for some time now by the brain trust at Epic. Based on "Hopechest," their judgment is right on.

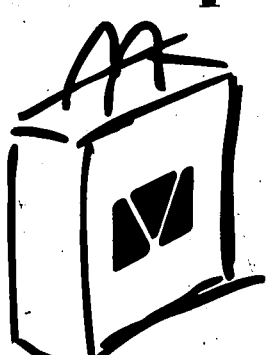

Not only does she have a hand in writing two of the better songs here, but she (or producers Todd Wilkes and Paul Worley) have the good sense to cover Kevin Welch, John Hiatt and Angela Kaset instead of the written-by-committee stuff most first-album artists are saddled with.

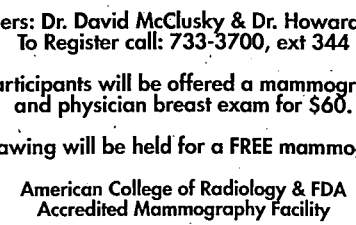

Bentley has virtually nothing to do with traditional country music. In another era, she would be the centerpiece of a girl group like The Crystals or The Supremes. There are hooks all over "Hopechest," though it veers at times pretty hard into a middle-of-the-road production and material that doesn't quite fit her. "Heart Half Empty," a duet with label mate Ty Herndon, is particularly hoary.

Commercially: a sleeper hit waiting to happen. Artistically: suspect there's an identity crisis to be resolved.

'Richter 10' strikes heart of disaster

Book review

By Vern Perry
Orange County Register

Exciting and frightening, exhilarating and thought-provoking, "Richter 10" (Bantam, $22.95) is ample proof that Arthur C. Clarke's star as the dean of living science fiction writers hasn't dimmed a bit over the past five decades.

The background of "Richter 10" is almost as interesting as the novel itself. Clarke dreamed up the idea after the devastating Northridge earthquake struck Los Angeles in January 1994. After watching news coverage on television at his home in Sri Lanka, Clarke immediately drew up an 850-word movie treatment of the story that would become "Richter 10."

"I did not have the necessary background to take the matter further, as my knowledge of California was restricted to the MGM backlot and the foyer of the Beverly Wilshire Hotel," Clarke writes in the novel's afterword. "So Mike McQuay (a Southern California writer) was commissioned to do all the hard work."

The result is a fascinating "hard science" novel about earthquake prediction — and, ultimately, earthquake prevention. However, it is also a story filled with fascinating and well-drawn characters and a logically conceived future extrapolated from today's political, religious and sociological headlines.

First and foremost, "Richter 10" is about Lewis Crane, whom we first meet as a 7-year-old whose life is changed in an instant when the Northridge quake destroys his home, killing both of his parents and leaving him with a crippled left arm. Thirty years later, Crane has become a scientist who dedicates his life to eradicating the terror that rumbles up unannounced from the depths of the Earth.

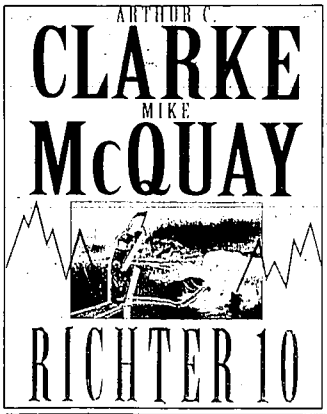

Arrogant, self-confident and yet charismatic, Crane has developed a way to predict earthquakes in time to warn people who live in the affected areas. When he successfully predicts a killer quake on a Japanese island, he becomes the darling of the media and his name becomes a household word throughout the world. Crane knows that if he can successfully predict an "unpredictable" quake he will be granted virtually unlimited funds with which to carry on his lifelong dream.

But there are forces at loose in the world that are as dangerous as earthquakes. One is the powerful Chinese-run company that controls the government of the United States, which has split itself along racial and religious lines. The Chinese corporation sees Crane's work only as a means of getting its mouthpiece candidates reelected. A second and in some ways even more frightening force is Brother Ishmael, leader of the Nation of Islam.

Although Ishmael has valid complaints — blacks have been totally segregated inside walled and guarded ghettoes in U.S. cities — he has become a religious zealot willing to use whatever means are within his grasp, including violence, to obtain his goal of a separate and independent country for blacks within the boundaries of the continental United States.

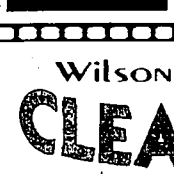

In addition to Crane and Brother Ishmael, "Richter 10" is populated by a wide range of equally fascinating characters. Dan Newcombe is Crane's second in command, a black geologist who is torn between his love of science and the horrendous treatment of his fellow blacks, which ultimately leads him to Brother Ishmael and the Nation of Islam.

Then there's Lanie King, a beautiful computer imager who plays an important part in the lives of Newcombe and Crane. Finally, there is Sumi Chan, a mysterious figure working for Crane whose secret life spells both disaster and redemption for Crane.

Sagan testifies in 'Demon-Haunted World'

Courtesy Barnes & Noble

By Willard St. John
Knight-Ridder News Service

Book review

"I'm frequently asked," Carl Sagan writes in his latest book, "Do you believe there's extraterrestrial life? I give the standard arguments —then I say it would be astonishing to me if there weren't extraterrestrial intelligence, but of course there is as yet no compelling evidence for it.

"Often, I'm asked next, 'What do you really think?'

"I say, 'I just told you what I really think.'

"Yes, but what's your gut feeling?"

"But I try not to think with my gut. If I'm serious about understanding the world, thinking with anything besides my brain, as tempting as that might be, is likely to get me into trouble. Really, it's okay to reserve judgment until the evidence is in."

The astronomer, perhaps the best-known scientist living, believes in evidence. "The Demon-Haunted World" (Random House, $25.95), the most personal of all his books, tells the basis of his belief, how the methods of science can help us find truth and why ignorance of science is not just sad but dangerous.

Sagan's biggest worry is what he sees as an increasing tendency of people to take refuge from the terrors of the world in pseudoscience, the cheap imitation of science that wraps a coat of pretended objectivity about a heart of "wishing will make it so."

In revealing the particulars of the danger, Sagan examines the UFO and alien abduction phenomena so prevalent in the last 50 years. He does not doubt the personal beliefs of those who say they have been the subject of unwelcome attentions from small gray creatures with big eyes. But the astronomer argues that such stories are based in hallucinations or visions of a type well known back to medieval days. Admitting that we don't know how people come to believe they've had an alien encounter is much preferable to accepting such paranormal experiences as real, Sagan writes.

Muzzie Braun, as Buck Divot, warns mothers not to let their babies grow up to be golf pros.

Muzzie Braun brings retooled act to town

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Muzzie Braun is bringing his new act to Twin Falls.

Audiences who know Braun as the dad of the singing Braun boys should prepare for a change of pace. These days, Braun is Buck Divot, master of western golf songs.

Dressed like a cowboy golfer – in custom-made golf boots and western golf shirts – he's singing songs like "Mummus, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Golf Pros." He's been playing golf tournaments throughout the state.

Saturday show

Muzzie Braun and Kip Attaway will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Turf Club. Doors will open at 7 p.m. Admission is $10.

Kip Attaway joins Braun in an appearance at the Turf Club.

Cody, 19, and Willy, 18, are doing well with their Prairie Mutts band, Dad Braun reports. In fact, they are on their way to Nashville to record an album of "new country" tunes.

The two youngest Braun boys are still at home in the central Idaho hamlet of Clayton. Micky is 15 and Gary is 16. Their dad is planning to take them back on the road this summer, and to join the Prairie Mutts for a few shows, too.

Meanwhile, Braun and his wife are keeping busy building a new house near the remote central Idaho log cabin they now call home.

"I'm going to put a solar electric system in this one," said Braun, "but it may be two more years before it's done, because it's pay as we go."

Muzzie is 46 now. Through the years, he's appeared on TV shows like "The Tonight Show" (with both Jay Leno and Johnny Carson), "The Grand Ol' Opry" and "TNN Nashville Now." He's also won a Wrangler Award from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, and he's recorded 10 albums – the latest titled "Keep Yer Head Up and Swing Really Hard."

He's currently doing a series of concerts for Idaho arts councils and playing dance music with a band. At his solo shows, he usually combines his older western tunes and Idaho mountain songs with some of his newer pieces.

Braun has just written "Your Drivin's Drivin' Me To Drink" (for his kids who are getting drivers licenses), "This Old Pocket Knife" and "Friends Don't Let Friends Line Dance."

His Buck Divot character was inspired by a love of the sport. He's been playing golf for years, he said, but he's not very good.

Known as the redneck's Eddie Murphy, Attaway has released five albums, written two songs in the top 100 country charts and won the Marlboro National Country Music Talent Search.

On stage, Attaway serves up one-liners and country blues songs about ugly bar broads, drunken rednecks and radioactive Idaho taters. His impersonations of Leon Redbone, Bob Dylan, Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson have been dubbed "deadly accurate."

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I published a letter from the grandparents of a 19-year-old woman who was brutally murdered by a young man with whom she had lived for four months.

Her grieving family asked if I would reprint the column that outlined the traits of a potential batterer. In her memory, here it is. It was adapted from "Signs to Look for in a Battering Personality," with permission from the Project for Victims of Family Violence, Fayetteville, Ark.

15 REASONS TO LEAVE YOUR LOVER, WARNING SIGNS OF AN ABUSIVE PERSONALITY

Something's just not right in your relationship, and you can't put your finger on it. So here's some help.

If your mate is displaying a combination of these behaviors, then you may have a potential batterer on your hands.

1. A PUSH FOR QUICK INVOLVEMENT: Comes on very strong, claiming, "I've never felt loved like this by anyone." An abuser pressures the woman for an exclusive commitment almost immediately.

2. JEALOUSY: Excessively possessive; calls constantly or visits unexpectedly; prevents you from going to work because "you might meet someone"; checks the mileage on your car.

3. CONTROLLING: Interrogates you intensely (especially if you're late) about whom you talked to, and where you were; keeps all the money; insists you ask permission to go anywhere or do anything.

4. UNREALISTIC EXPECTATIONS: Expects you to be the perfect woman and meet his every need.

5. ISOLATION: Tries to cut you off from family and friends; accuses people who are your supporters of "causing trouble"; the abuser may deprive you of a phone or car or try to prevent you from holding a job.

6. BLAMES OTHERS FOR PROBLEMS AND MISTAKES: The boss, you — it's always someone else's fault if anything goes wrong.

7. MAKES EVERYONE ELSE RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS FEELINGS: The abuser says, "You make me angry" instead of, "I am angry" or, "You're hurting me by not doing what I tell you." Less obvious is the claim: "You make me happy."

8. HYPERSENSITIVITY: Is easily insulted, claiming that his feelings are hurt when he is really mad.

He'll rant about the injustice of things that are just part of life.

9. CRUELTY TO ANIMALS AND TO CHILDREN: Kills or punishes animals brutally. Also may expect children to do things that are far beyond their ability (whips a 2-year-old for wetting a diaper) or may tease them until they cry.

Sixty-five percent of abusers who beat their partner will also abuse children.

10. "PLAYFUL" USE OF FORCE DURING SEX: Enjoys throwing you down or holding you down against your will during sex; says he finds the idea of rape exciting.

11. VERBAL ABUSE: Constantly criticizes you, or says blatantly cruel, hurtful things; degrades, curses, calls you ugly names.

This may also involve sleep deprivation, waking you up with relentless verbal abuse.

12. RIGID SEX ROLES: Expects you to serve, obey and remain at home.

13. SUDDEN MOOD SWINGS: Switches from sweetly loving to explosively violent in a matter of minutes.

14. PAST BATTERING: Admits hitting women in the past, but says they made him do it or the situation brought it on.

15. THREATS OF VIOLENCE: Makes statements like, "I'll break your neck" or "I'll kill you," and then dismisses them with, "Everybody talks that way" or "I didn't really mean it." If he has come this far, it is time to get help, or get out.

Impersonator plays Jackpot

The Times-News

JACKPOT – James Stephens III, who "musically channels" the legendary voices of Louis Armstrong and Elvis Presley, will perform at Cactus Petes Resort Casino Tuesday through April 7.

The comedian was once a political science and criminal law student at Seattle University. But, by the middle 1980s, when Showtime was looking for comedians to feature on The Comedy Club Network, Stephens had changed his focus.

Accomplished in five musical instruments, he's the youngest of seven children and a self-proclaimed Army brat.

On stage, he does the musical voices of Michael Jackson, Stevie Wonder and the Spinners, in addition to Armstrong and Presley. Sometimes, he does Kermit the Frog sings Lionel Richie.

A regular on the comedy club circuit, Stephens was recently featured on the Fox tribute to Ray Charles. He's also been on "Comic Strip Live" and "Comedy Tonight's 10th Anniversary Special."

He often co-hosts NBC's "Friday Night Videos" and has appeared on MTV's "Half-Hour Comedy Hour" and The Family Channel's "Stand-Up Comics Take a Stand."

Impersonator at Cactus Petes

James Stephens III will perform at an 8 p.m. dinner show and an 11 p.m. cocktail show, Cactus Petes Resort Casino. Dinner show prices start $7.95 on weeknights and $9.95 on Saturdays. There's a $5 cover charge for the cocktail show on weeknights and $7.50 on weekends.

For more information or reservations, call 1-800-821-1103.

'Sgt. Bilko' marches into valley theaters

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this week. Reviews are by Knight-Ridder Newspapers reviewers:

"A Family Thing" — Robert Duvall and James Earl Jones team up for an offbeat drama about a redneck who finds out, after his mother's death, a secret that has been kept from him for 60 years — that he's part black and he has a half-brother. (Twin Cinema)

"Babe" — When the animatronic wizards at the Creature Shop, created by sorely missed Muppets creator Jim Henson, take on a project, expect first-rate visual and special effects. "Babe" is the best yet. (Liberty Theater of Hailey)

"The Birdcage" — Robin Williams wears the pants in this remake of the French farce "La Cage aux Folles," in which he and his swishy companion masquerade as a traditional married couple for the benefit of the homophobic parents (Gene Hackman, Dianne Weist) of his son's fiancee. Rated R; language, sexual theme. (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

"Black Sheep" — SNL teammates Chris Farley and David Spade team up for this low-brow slapsticker about a dopey brother (Farley) embarassing his politician brother (Tim Matheson) on the campaign trail. PG-13 (cartoon violence, profanity) (Liberty Theater of Hailey)

"Broken Arrow" — Slam-bang action from Hong Kong maestro John Woo and Speed screenwriter Graham Yost, about a nasty bomber pilot (a gleefully evil John Travolta) plotting to hijack some nukes. Christian Slater and Samantha Mathis, pilot and park ranger respectively, team up to thwart him. R (violence, profanity) (Gooding Cinema, Ace Theater of Wendell)

"Diabolique" — This campy remake of the 1955 French classic about two woman who murder the man who is abusive spouse to one and abusive lover to the other stars Sharon Stone, Isabelle Adjani, Chazz Palminteri and more stylistic overkill than 24 hours of MTV. R (nudity, violence, profanity) (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

"Down Periscope" — Kelsey Grammer stars as the maverick commander of a misfit submarine crew in this no-brainer comedy that pits a rustbucket diesel sub against the high-tech U.S. Navy. Lauren Holly, as the sole female onboard, is the butt of several dumb sex jokes and a prank involving a brassiere. PG-13 (profanity, sexual humor) (Twin Cinema)

"Executive Decision" — Arab terrorists hijack a jetliner and threaten to bomb Washington with a deadly nerve gas that will paralyze the U.S. government. As if we couldn't do it ourselves! Kurt Russell and Steven Seagal lead the mid-air counter-attack. R (violence, language) (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Sun Valley Opera House)

"From Dusk Till Dawn" — Bank-robbing brothers on the lam kidnap a preacher and his kids and head for the sleaziest, strangest topless bar in Mexico, in this way-too-much collaboration between Quentin Tarantino (his script, and a leading role) and Robert Rodriguez, who directs. Can you say, Satan? R (extreme violence, gore, profanity, topless dancing vampires) (Liberty Theater of Hailey)

"Grumpier Old Men" — Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau reprise their roles as the crotchetiest ice fisherman in Minnesota. Also starring Ann-Margret and Sophia Loren. PG (sexual innuendo, profanity). (Motor-Vu Drive-in)

"Homeward Bound II: Lost In San Francisco" — A harmless but mostly cheerless sequel in which our trio of wisecracking quardrapeds — two dogs and a cat — brave the urban-scapes of San Francisco in an effort to reunite with their lost human owners. G (pet urination, dogfights) (Twin Cinema)

"Jumanji" — A big, messy adaptation of Chris Van Allsburg's picture book about a magic game that unleashes wild beasts and wilder weather, with Robin Williams starring as a man-child trapped in the game for 26 years. Graceless, loud and laden with not-so-special special effects. PG (rampaging beasts, children in jeopardy, general mayhem) (Motor-Vu Drive-in, Burley Theater)

"Leaving Las Vegas" — Mike Figgis' sad, eloquent tale about an especially self-destructive drunk and a hard-bitten prostitute is among the most satisfying pictures of the year. This a love story — a terminal love story — and it has a dark poetry about it, and exceptional performances by Nicolas Cage and Elisabeth Shue at its core. (sexual situations, alcohol abuse, profanity, violence) (Liberty Theater of Hailey)

"Mr. Holland's Opus" — A sweeping melodrama that spans 30 years in the life of an aspiring composer (Richard Dreyfuss) who becomes an inspirational high school music teacher. "Opus" is a very large and very insistent reflex hammer applied to the ducts instead of the knees. (language) (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

"Oliver and Company" — Disney's animated "Oliver and Company" is based on "Oliver Twist," and its animal characters are cute as the dickens. Oliver (voice of Joey Lawrence) is a kitten who falls in with a group of strays, including the lovable mutt, Dodger (Billy Joel), and his human pal, Fagin (Dom DeLuise). Oliver befriends a poor little loaded girl, and when she gets kidnapped by a low-life scum, it's kitties and puppies to the rescue. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

"Primal Fear" — A man with multiple personalities is tried for the murder of an archbishop in this courtroom drama about of the politics of the justice system. With Richard Gere. (Twin Cinema, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

"Race the Sun" — Another ragtag-underdogs-vs.-imperious-frontrunners movie, this one set on the sun-baked highways of the Australian outback, where misfit Hawaiian high schoolers enter an international solar-powered car race — with utterly predictable results. PG (mild profanity, underage drinking) (Twin Cinema)

"Sgt. Bilko" — Harrison Ford captured the loneliness of "The Fugitive." Mel Gibson caught some of the charm of "Maverick." But Steve Martin misses "Sgt. Bilko's" target. Bilko, as immortalized by Phil Silvers in the classic 1950s TV series, is the consummate con man. Martin doesn't have the right tempo or the right attitude, and even those unfamiliar with the old tube show will sense that something is amiss. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Magic Lantern Cinema of Ketchum)

"Sense And Sensibility" — Sublimely funny, ravishingly gorgeous and deft in its criticism of social snobbery, this film adapted by Emma Thompson from the Jane Austen novel published in 1811, in some ways improves upon the original. PG (adult themes) (Jerome Cinema).

"Tom and Huck" — Two knifings and a few nasty expletives make "Tom and Huck" too heavy for the under-10 crowd. And Mark Twain purists probably will consider Jonathan Taylor Thomas too wholesome for the role of Tom Sawyer. Most other viewers, though, should find plenty to like about this adaptation of Twain's novel "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." (Shoshone Showhouse)

"Up Close And Personal" — What began years ago as a project about the life and death of Jessica Savitch turns into an uneasy mix of a straight-faced "Broadcast News" and "A Star is Born." Michelle Pfeiffer as a rising network star and Robert Redford as her mentor focus their star power, but this one misses the big story on the world of Action News. PG-13 (sex, language) (Mall Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

Magic Valley stores count 'Seven' on video shelves

The Times-News

New videos in Twin Falls stores this week:

New videos

"Seven" (R) — This a gruesome detective-thriller about a serial killer who ices egregious offenders of the seven deadly sins, portends an unpalatable combination of formulaic writing and unmitigated nastiness.

But although the movie, directed by David ("Alien") Fincher, is grisly and certainly doesn't make movie history, it's surprisingly well-constructed. It also has the graceful benefit of Morgan Freeman, who turns his role into something masterful. He even makes Brad Pitt look actorly next to him.

In a non-specific metropolis not unlike New York City, a horrifyingly fat man is found dead, manacled and face down in a plate of spaghetti.

A second victim, a defense attorney, is discovered with his sides flayed. He has bled to death. The word "greed" is written in blood on the floor. It becomes clear to Freeman, a well-read veteran detective on the case, that the city should anticipate further killings exacted for the sins of sloth, wrath, pride, lust and envy.

There's little point describing any more of the horrors, although you should know that Freeman accurately predicts that the case won't have a "happy ending." But what makes things watchable is Fincher's direction. He has a gift for building understated menace. His cinematographer, Darius Khondji, puts a silky contrast into the colors, making things seem velvety, dark and intense. Howard ("The Silence of the Lambs") Shore's score is memorably insistent, forever prodding you with anxiety. And Fincher lets the characters buff up their roles with significant pauses, inflections and occasional comic touches.

The movie is not merely about tracking yet another sick puppy with a pseudo-biblical plan, it's about the relationship between the taciturn Freeman, who's days away from retirement, and the hotheaded Pitt, his overeager, significantly under-read replacement.

But Freeman gives a sensational journeyman's performance, as one who has worked steadily and thoroughly for more than 30 years, and hasn't pulled out his gun ("with the intention of using it") more than three times. (Washington Post) (Video West, Blockbuster, Hastings, Old Towne Video)

"Last of the Dogmen" (PG) — When we first encounter Lewis Gates, the rugged hero of Tab Murphy's contemporary western, "Last of the Dogmen," he's horizontal on a bar, waking with a bad hangover after a night of hard drinking. A man whose sole friend seems to be his wily Australian cattle dog Zip, Gates is, we are told, nonetheless the best tracker in all the state, drunk or sober.

And so, when three dangerous convicts escape into the "Oxbow Quadrangle" of the Montana Rockies, it's this anachronistic cowpoke — played by a scruffy, bearish Tom Berenger — who is recruited to find them. Armed with his rifle, his pistol, his chewing tobacco and his hat and riding a horse with little Zip leading the way, Gates heads into the trees. Days later in "the roughest country God's ever put on a map," the tracker catches up with the runaway cons.

But before he can get to them, somebody else — or some thing else — does first. In the light of morning when the mist clears, all that's left is a few bloody shreds of prison-issue clothes and a broken arrow.

The central premise of "Last of the Dogmen," a movie with a macho factor that's off the charts, is that a lost tribe of Cheyenne warriors, the "dog soldiers" of the Indian-Army wars of the 1860s, has survived undetected, generation upon generation, in the mountainous forests of northwest Montana.

When Gates' gut tells him that these dogmen, in fact, might be the cause of the convicts' disappearance, he seeks out an anthropologist whose specialty is American Indian culture.

Barbara Hershey is Dr. Lillian Sloan, who first greets Gates' theory with amusement but comes to believe there might be something to it.

And so an expedition into the Oxbow is planned — although Gates thinks Sloan should send her male assistant along. (Knight-Ridder Newspapers) (Old Towne Video, Hastings, Blockbuster, Video West)

"Mallrats"(PG-13) — There's at least one joke for every bodily excretion in "Mallrats," a raucous comedy that hits more often than it misses.

Most of the jokes can't be repeated here, but the key to "Mallrats" is writer/director Kevin Smith, who concocts the same kind of stylized dialogue that kept the crude "Clerks" on its toes: His characters look like they just stepped out of a music video, but they have the sense and sensibility of Jane Austen. (Knight-Ridder Newspapers) (Blockbuster, Hastings, Video West)

Billy Squier wraps up Capitol alliance with retrospective

Rockbeat

NEW YORK (AP) — After years of progressively lower album sales and progressively less interest from his record label, singer Billy Squier walked away — and for all intents and purposes, ended his career. Is this what you'd expect him to say?

"I could care less," said Squier. "I'm very happy with who I am. I'm very proud of what I've done. I have a great deal of respect for myself as a musician and a writer, even if I'm not doing it anymore."

In an interview over brunch at a New York restaurant, Squier chose not to vent his frustrations at Capitol Records; rather, he wanted it to be known that he's doing just fine, thank you. A two-CD anthology of his work, "Reach for the Sky," recently was released by Chronicles, a division of Polygram.

His relationship with Capitol always has been rocky; it started when the label at first refused to put out "The Stroke," from his 1981 platinum album, "Don't Say No," as a single. It became one of his biggest hits.

"They didn't even want to put it on the record," he said. "They didn't think it was that good. ... I knew there was nothing else like it."

His last two albums, 1991's "Creatures of Habit" and 1993's "Tell the Truth," came out with little fanfare. But despite the label's lack of enthusiasm, Squier knew he was consistently delivering good work.

"The public always decides, I think," he said. "Unfortunately, in the case of me with Capitol, the public didn't get a chance to decide because they barely put them out. ... I felt that I was evolving as a writer, and I think that there's certainly a lot of work on those records which is certainly the equal of previous stuff, if not better."

If anything, the split left him stronger.

"It didn't shake my confidence at all," he said. "I just decided I didn't want to be in the music business. I felt that I was not going to do this work anymore if it was going to be treated this way."

Now, Squier writes songs on his own terms, but he's indulging other interests as well. He's been working on a CD-ROM project to go along with the anthology and has been taking classes in philosophy, art, and theater.

He admits he's not quite comfortable with his new lifestyle.

"I've been used to so long for being a somebody, but you know, we're all somebodies," he said. "It sounds like a cliche, but I'm just as important sitting here now as if I had a record.

"The attitude that I'm taking now (is) much different than the way I've lived my life. Basically, my life was music, and I was always consumed by it. Now, I have a different perspective. ... Do I need the career to justify who I am? I used to need that."

The retrospective covers the 45-year-old Squier's career from his first hand, Piper, in the late 1970s, to "Tell the Truth." The earliest songs, like Piper's "Who's Your Boyfriend" and "Little Miss Intent," pave the way for the sarcasm and irony Squier later developed in subsequent tracks such as "The Stroke," "Everybody Wants You" and "Don't Say You Love Me."

His range always has been impressive; he can go from a bash-er like "The Big Beat" (from 1980's "Tale of the Tape") to introspective moments like "Nobody Knows" (from "Don't Say No") to playful songs laced with sexual innuendo like "She Goes Down" (from "Creatures of Habit").

He can do the wracked-with-pain ballad — "Til It's Over" (from 1985's "Enough Is Enough") — and he can do something that's smoldering sexual, like "My Kinda Lover" (from "Don't Say No").

Briefly in the arts

Shakespeare troupe performs today

TWIN FALLS – The Idaho Shakespeare Festival Troop from Boise will perform at 11 a.m. today at the Magic Valley Alternative High School, 209 Fifth Ave. N. (Presbyterian Church). For more information, call 733-8823.

Wilson, McKee play Saturday night

KETCHUM – Wilson and McKee will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Big Wood Bakery, located across from the Sun Valley Garden Center on Northwood Way at the Ketchum Industrial Center. A contra dance with the Wood River String Band will follow the concert.

Kim McKee brings Celtic influences on hammered dulcimer and mountain dulcimer, while Ken Wilson adds a folk flavor with his guitar, banjo, Irish bozouki and stories. Compact discs and cassettes will be available at the event. For more information, call Paul Todd of the Wood River Folk Music Society at 788-0934.

Arts Council sponsors card contest

Three original artworks by adults and one original piece by a youth will be selected to be printed on Christmas cards. The theme is "Christmas in the Magic Valley." Winning artwork will be auctioned at the gala opening of the Festival of Trees, and the artist will receive 50 percent of the sale. Artists also will receive 50 copies of their Christmas card.

Deadline for submission is June 30. Artwork will be juried by the visual arts committee of the Magic Valley Arts Council. Entry forms are available at Larson Arts Galley, Old Town Gallery and the Magic Valley Arts Council office.

The project is a benefit for the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center children's programs and the Magic Valley Arts Council to promote the arts and culture in the Magic Valley.

For more information, call 734-ARTS.

TWIN FALLS – Twin Falls High School's Theater Department will present Neil Simon's "Prisoner of Second Avenue" in April.

Poor Mel Edison, played by Philip Valenta, lives in a high-rise apartment in New York City and is tormented by noisy neighbors, garbage in the streets and the impending loss of his job, so he takes a short vacation from reality. His wife Edna, played by Amber Hampshire, works to keep them afloat during this time. Mel's four meddling siblings, played by Nathan Schmidt, Jennifer Miller, Britteni Sojka and Stormy Edwards, create hysterical disaster.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. April 11, 12 and 13 at the Roper Auditorium. Cost is $4 for adults and $2 for students with activity cards, senior citizens and children, or $10 for a family package (up to six people). Children under age 6 are discouraged. For tickets, contact the Drama Department at Twin Falls High School or call Rickie Palmer at 734-6419.

Cactus Petes seeks guests' anecdotes

JACKPOT – Cactus Petes Resort Casino is celebrating its 40th anniversary and wants the help of its guests.

Guests are invited to submit stories, anecdotal accounts or other descriptions of memorable visits, such as weddings, anniversary celebrations, extraordinary instances of superior guest service, winning large jackpots, impressive runs of good look and attending the first show in the Gala Showroom.

Top entrants will be invited to attend Cactus Petes 40th Birthday Party on July 6 and have their submissions published in the quarterly magazine, "Gaming Hotline."

Entries can be mailed to Cactus Petes Marketing Department, P.O. Box 508, Jackpot, NV 89825, or submitted via e-mail to entguru@cactuspetes.com. Deadline for submissions is June 15. For more information, call 1-800-442-3833, Ext. 6712.

Twain

Dion

Chalk up a blockbuster week on the American charts by female artists from Canada, who are dominating the action on several top lists with three very different styles.

For months, the big names have been rock upstart Alanis Morissette and new country queen Shania Twain, whose current albums continue to generate hit singles and reap major awards.

And this week, a new name joins the magic circle: Celine Dion, who for years has been right on the edge of major success as a pop chanteuse.

Dion now has officially arrived, and not just because her blockbuster ballad "Because You Loved Me" is No. 1 this week on two top lists — pop singles (for the second week) and adult-contemporary (where she ended the record-setting run of "One Sweet Day" by Mariah Carey and Boyz II Men).

Adding to her prestige is the fact that her new album, "Falling Into You," blew onto the top albums list at a phenomenal No. 2, which is higher than the peak position of any of her previous albums.

Dion's big debut put her right behind Morissette's Grammy-winning "Jagged Little Pill," which now has been No. 1 for six weeks. And also in the Top 10 on the albums list at No. 8 is Twain's Grammy-winning "The Woman in Me," which also has been No. 1 on the country charts for 21 weeks.

Just how unusual is it for a Canadian artist to have both the both the most popular single and most popular album on the American charts?

It's only happened twice before: in 1972 by Neil Young and in 1974 by Gordon Lightfoot.

But never before has the feat been accomplished either by a female artist or by two different artists.

Adding to the lists of firsts is that Morissette's latest single, "Ironic," is still leading the modern-rock list (and also is No. 6 on the pop list), which means that the three Canadian women currently hold down the No. 1 spots on five top American charts — pop singles and adult-contemporary (Dion), country albums (Twain) and pop albums and modern rock (Morissette).

There was plenty of action elsewhere on the pop albums chart, with four other releases scoring big debuts: "Mercury Falling" by Sting at No. 5, "Unplugged" by the reunited Kiss at No. 15, Sepultura's "Roots" at No. 27 and "Bad Hair Day" by "Weird Al" Yankovic at No. 28.

Back on the pop singles list, it was another good week for the Whitney Houston-CeCe Winans collaboration "Count on Me," which zipped from No. 32 to No. 19. But because Houston's "Exhale" dropped from No. 18 to No. 31, the soundtrack from "Waiting to Exhale" lost out on a chance to have four singles in the Top 20 simultaneously. But there still are two "Exhale" singles in the Top 10: Brandy's "Sittin' Up in My Room" at No. 3 and Mary J. Blige's "Not Gon' Cry" at No. 5.

Rain cancels slate of high school contests

All four high school athletic events scheduled for Thursday were rained out.

The track meet at Glenns Ferry with Richfield, Carey, Hansen, Kimberly and Raft River is tentatively planned for today, weather permitting.

Skrederstu pulls hat trick on 11th at Canyon Springs

Skrederstu used his 4-iron on the 168-yard par-3, 11th hole at Canyon Springs Golf Course. The players that witnessed the feat and handed over the money were Bill Saxton, Bill Thomason, Gary Hanchey and Dave Hanchey.

The player of the year is Connecticut senior Jennifer Rizzotti, whose leadership and hustle have kept the Huskies in the running for a second straight national championship.

Both awards, based on voting by Associated Press member newspapers nationwide, were presented Thursday. The AP initiated the women's awards last year and Connecticut swept them both – Geno Auriemma as coach of the year and Rebecca Lobo as the top player.

One of Marbury's older brothers said the freshman guard will enter the NBA draft, but Yellow Jackets coach Bobby Cremins insists Marbury is still considering his options. "No, Stephon has not made the final decision," Cremins said Thursday as he arrived in New York for the Final Four and a gathering of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

The Times News

TWIN FALLS – The Scenic West Athletic Conference North Division baseball teams begin conference play this weekend with a full slate of games on tap.

The College of Southern Idaho hosts Ricks Friday and Saturday, while North Idaho College travels to Treasure Valley Community College.

Ricks, which won its second consecutive North Division title last season, will play the Golden Eagles at 4 p.m. today in a 9-inning game.

College of Southern Idaho finished in second place last season with Treasure Valley in third and North Idaho fourth.

Three of the North Division's teams are picked in a coach's poll to go 1-2-3 in Region 18 this season. Southern Idaho tops the picks, followed by Ricks and Treasure Valley, respectively.

The Golden Eagles won the national junior college World Series in 1984 and has made nine trips to the World Series.

Several top returning players dot the rosters of North Division teams. Southern Idaho pitcher and first baseman Brandon Duckworth (6-foot, 2-inches, 190 lbs.) will be back and Treasure Valley catcher John Margaritis (6-1, 190).

Duckworth was named to the Region 18 second team last season and is tabbed a pre-season All-American at first base this year after hitting .423 last season with 30 RBIs.

CSI coach Jim Walker and North Idaho coach Jack Bloxom are among the nation's winningest coaches in the junior college ranks.

For fans unable to attend today's game between CSI and Ricks, the Golden Eagles will play at home Saturday against Ricks in a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m.

Cornhuskers shed Hawks for NIT title

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's old hat for Nebraska football teams to win national championships. After 100 years, the basketball team finally has a national title of its own.

The Cornhuskers came up with a big defensive effort Thursday night and beat St. Joseph's 60-55 to win the NIT.

"I really thought about that when the game ended," tournament MVP Erick Strickland said. "We won a national title. We know it's not nearly what the football team has done but we are proud of it and I tell you what, I know the football players are proud of us."

Junior center Mikki Moore came up big on both ends of the court in the final 5½ minutes to lead Nebraska, which salvaged what looked like a horrible regular season by winning the nation's oldest postseason tournament at Madison Square Garden.

"This is big," coach Danny Nee said. "It's something never done before in 100 years. Believe me, it's a significant step."

The Cornhuskers (21-14) looked to be in control with a 41-28 lead with 16:36 to play. But the Hawks (19-13), playing in front of 30 busloads of students who made the 100-mile trip from Philadelphia, tied the game at 47-47.

St. Joseph's, which has never won a national title in basketball, used a 14-2 run to draw even, with reserve Terrell Myers scoring half the points. The run included an intentional foul against Nebraska's Tyronn Lue that turned into a five-point play.

"The run took a lot out of us but we just didn't finish the game," St. Joseph's forward Reggie Townsend said. "We just didn't make the big shot we had to."

And the 6-foot-11 Moore had a lot to do with that as Nebraska didn't let the Hawks go ahead. He gave the Cornhuskers a 55-49 lead when he dunked and was fouled. He missed the free throw for the three-point play, but he grabbed the rebound, was fouled and made two free throws with 5:27 left.

Nebraska wouldn't score again until there were 40 seconds left, but Moore was there on the defensive end, blocking shots by Townsend and Rashid Bey that could have made it a two-point game.

"Moore has been unbelievable the last three weeks," Nee said. "We have to get some weight on him but we think he will be a big player for us."

Strickland, who led the Cornhuskers with 13 points, made four straight free throws in the final minute and Moore added one more with 15 seconds left to seal the win.

Strickland talked about the defense of he and fellow guard Jaron Boone that forced the Hawks' backcourt to shoot a combined 2-for-19.

"We played physical with them," Strickland said. "We didn't let them come off picks without getting a body."

Moore, Boone and Lue each added 11 points for the Cornhuskers, the first team from the Big Eight to win the NIT since Colorado in 1940. This is the last season for the Big Eight as it will merge with four schools from the Southwest Conference next season to form the Big 12.

NIT

Tulane 87, Alabama 76

NEW YORK – Jerald Honeycutt scored 18 points and LaVeldro Simmons added 17 and Tulane beat Alabama 87-76 Thursday night in the consolation game of the NIT.

The Green Wave (22-10) never trailed and held off three runs by the Crimson Tide (19-13), who got no closer than four points, the last time at 71-67.

The teams met earlier in the season and Alabama overcame a 16-point second-half deficit in that one for an 80-79 victory. The Crimson Tide trailed 67-55 this time with 10:59 to play and scored eight straight points to get within four. They got there that one last time, but Tulane closed the game by making six of seven free throws over the final 1:30 to seal the win.

Eric Washington led Alabama with a career-high 35 points on 11-for-19 shooting, including 5-for-8 from 3-point range. The junior guard averaged 26 points over the five games in the NIT.

Roy Rogers added 15 points and eight rebounds for the Crimson Tide.

Georgia faces unfamiliar in Stanford foe

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – In a Final Four where it seems like everyone's seen more of their opponents recently than they'd like, Georgia's Lady Bulldogs are the exception.

Men prepar, quiet coach – D3

Georgia's foe in Friday night's national semifinals is Stanford, a team the Lady Bulldogs have not played since 1993.

That's an unusual scenario considering the participants in this year's Final Four are the same as last year. It's even more peculiar considering the Lady Bulldogs own victories this season over the other two teams in the Final Four – Tennessee and defending champion Connecticut.

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – The roles have changed for Tennessee and Connecticut in the women's Final Four. This time, it's Connecticut carrying the burden.

The two meet Friday night in the national semifinals, a rematch of the 1995 championship game Connecticut won 70-64.

It was a bitter loss for Tennessee, whose only goal since the beginning of the season had been to win the national championship. And it capped a dream season for Connecticut, which finished 35-0.

This season, Connecticut has found that being the defending champion is a lot harder than being would-be champion.

Pair lead at Dinah Shore

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) – Annika Sorenstam, who could barely talk, and Tracy Kerdyk, icing down her sore right hand, matched 5-under-par 67s Thursday to share the opening day lead in the Nabisco Dinah Shore, the LPGA's first major of the year.

Sorenstam, getting over the flu, had laryngitis. After her round, she could only whisper replies to reporters' questions.

Kerdyk sprained ligaments around the knuckle of her right middle finger when her club stuck in the ground while she was practicing Tuesday. She had to skip the pro-am the next day and thought she might have to drop out of the tournament.

Despite their ailments, Sorenstam and Kerdyk were one shot ahead of three-time Dinah Shore champion Amy Alcott and Martha Nause after the first round at Mission Hills Country Club.

Sally Little, the Dinah Shore winner 14 years ago, was in a group at 3-under with Hollis Stacy, Kathy Guadagnino and Tracy Hanson.

Sorenstam, a 26-year-old from Sweden by way of the University of Arizona, is trying for her first LPGA win of 1996. The tour's player of the year and leading money-winner in 1995, she has played in two earlier events this year, finishing sixth at both Tucson and Phoenix.

"I'm usually a slow starter, so I'm very pleased with a 67 in the first round," she said.

Weather wrecks havoc at Players

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) – Justin Leonard watched the rash of first-time winners on the PGA Tour with great curiosity. He knows how tough it is to get No. 1.

But after a 7-under-par 65 on Thursday – with a back nine that featured only 10 putts, six birdies and two great par saves – Leonard sounded like he wanted his breakthrough victory this week in The Players Championship. "I'm really looking forward to tomorrow," Leonard said after finishing the first round tied for the lead with Kenny Perry, one stroke ahead of Craig Parry and two better than David Frost, Mark Calcavecchia and Kirk Triplett.

Sixty-nine players were still on the course when lightning stopped play and will finish Friday morning. Of those, Brian Kamm and Jeff Sluman were 5-under and six others were 4-under.

"You've got to assume you're going to continue that kind of play," Sluman said after his round was interrupted with him facing a 7-foot birdie put on his 15th hole. "It's unique to get out there and start the day with a putt."

Defending champion Lee Janzen and Nick Price shot 70, Colin Montgomerie and Ernie Els were at 71 and Greg Norman birdied two of the first three holes but stumbled in at 1-over-par 73.

"I haven't been able to say 'made it' that many times in a while," Leonard said after rolling in seven birdie putts of from 3 feet to 40 feet.

Graf makes Lipton finals

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) – Steffi Graf, treasuring tennis as never before, closed within one victory of another trophy Thursday.

The top-seeded Graf extended her winning streak to 18 consecutive matches by beating No. 8 Lindsay Davenport 6-4, 6-4 in the semifinals of the Lipton Championships.

Her opponent in Saturday's final will be No. 6 Chanda Rubin, who rallied past unseeded Karina Habsudova 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

No. 2 seed Pete Sampras and No. 6 Goran Ivanisevic will stage a serving showdown in the men's semifinals Friday night.

Sampras beat unseeded Floridian Vince Spadea 6-3, 6-4, while Ivanisevic smacked 12 aces and overpowered No. 4 Michael Chang 6-4, 6-4.

No. 3 Andre Agassi will play No. 15 Arnaud Boetsch of France in the other semifinal Friday.

Tigers nip Borah juniors in 9th for 12-10 victory

The Times-News

BOISE – The Jerome baseball team picked up its first win of the season in a rain-soaked hitters' duel with the Borah juniors Wednesday, 12-10.

The Tigers built a 6-1 lead after two innings, but the persistent rain wreaked havoc on Jerome pitchers in the fourth. Jerome pitchers walked three batters and hit four more in the frame to help the Lions score eight runs.

Trailing 10-9, Jerome eked out three runs in the last inning to win it.

Wes Bauer walked and moved up on a Ryan Lierman single. Both runners stole bases, allowing Brad Thompson to score them with a single.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was scratched due to rain. Jerome (1-4) hosts Burley on Saturday.

Judge grants more time to grand jury in drug case

DALLAS (AP) – A judge on Thursday extended by 30 days the term of a grand jury reviewing evidence from a motel drug bust at which Dallas Cowboys star Michael Irvin and a former teammate were present.

State District Judge John Creuzot granted the panel's request for more time despite a protest from the attorney for the All-Pro wide receiver, who has not been charged but subpoenaed as a witness in the case.

The panel recessed for the day and had not issued any indictments in the case.

"The Irving Police Department has not requested the grand jury to investigate any further.

"This has never been done that I know of," he said.

"This is a misuse of the grand jury."

Huskies

"That's probably been the hardest thing to overcome," Connecticut coach Geno Auriemma said, "the fact that everywhere you go you have to play everybody's best shot every game, every night."

That pressure came to a head Jan. 15 when the Huskies lost to Georgia 75-67, ending their 44-game winning streak at home.

"That's the first time I can remember one of our teams not having the energy level and mental ability to bear down in the last two minutes," Auriemma said. "I think that's when it took its toll. I think since that day, we've been a different team."

Fourth-ranked Tennessee (30-4) set no national championship goals this season. And after rallying from a 17-point deficit to beat Virginia to reach the Final Four, Tennessee might be the team that's just happy to be here.

"Last year, we felt a lot of pressure," coach Pat Summitt said. "I think we went on the court feeling like we had to win a national title. I think we're wanting obviously to win, but we won't feel like a failure if we don't get out and play a perfect game and bring home a title.

"I think we can take a more relaxed attitude and hopefully, that will benefit our play."

Tennessee has lost three straight games to Connecticut – one in each of the last two regular seasons plus the '95 title game. The last of those losses, 59-53 on Jan. 3, broke Tennessee's 69-game home court winning streak.

"I think in the back of our mind, losing three times in a row to UConn hurts a little bit," senior guard Latina Davis said. "The national championship game, I know for me personally, it's been on my mind all year. Although we have gone on, still, you can't forget about something like that."

Connecticut won all three of its games with Tennessee by pulling away with strong play at the end. Guard Jennifer Rizzotti said that's a Huskies' trademark. "We just have confidence in each other that we can tough it out," Rizzotti said. "And a lot of it in the last five minutes of the game has to do with mental toughness."

With Rizzotti and 6-foot-7 Kara Wolters, Connecticut has two first-team All-Americans. Tennessee has veterans in the backcourt with Davis and senior Michelle Marciniak, but the Lady Vols' best player is a freshman, 6-2 Chamique Holdsclaw. She's averaging 16.3 points and nine rebounds, and earned third-team All-America honors.

Holdsclaw injured her right knee in the finals of the Southeastern Conference tournament, but has come back to play in every NCAA game. Auriemma said he thinks another doctor should check her out, and he offered the services of his brother.

"He's a contractor and a part-time doctor and I think they should get a second opinion," he said. "I'm not sure that kid's healthy enough to play. I think they need a better doctor than the one that operated on her and my brother said he's going to take a look at it."

On a more serious note, Auriemma compared Holdsclaw to Southern Cal's Cheryl Miller and Ohio State's Katie Smith as freshmen who have made a major impact on their team. "I think everybody knew she was going to be great player. The fact she's done it so quickly, I think, has surprised a lot of people. She's added another dimension to that team."

Georgia

"We're just not very familiar with them," he said Thursday. "I'm not sure I can compare them with anybody."

While the Lady Bulldogs (27-4) may not know as much as they want about Stanford, the Cardinal players are well aware of what Georgia can do.

Specifically, they know all about point guard Saudia Roundtree, a first-team All-American. The 5-foot-7 senior is coming off a 37-point performance – the best of her career – that carried Georgia to a 1-point victory over top-ranked Louisiana Tech in the Midwest Region finals.

The task of trying to match up against Roundtree will fall on Stanford's Jamila Wideman, who described the assignment as "kind of scary. I haven't seen anyone during the regular season who has the skills that she has."

Stanford (29-2) tried to find a player in practices this week who was capable of coming close to generating Roundtree's explosive speed. Those efforts, according to Wideman, were largely unsuccessful.

"If we could, then we'd have a player like her – which would be nice," she said.

"You can not simply stop her," Landers said. "You can't commit two people on Saudia or throw a junk defense out there and beat Georgia when the other people on the court are La'Keshia Frett, Kedra Holland, Tracy Henderson and others."

Both Georgia and Stanford will be looking to do something they didn't last year: advance past the national semifinals.

"People fail to realize that this is a more mature basketball team than last year," Roundtree said. "By no means is this the same team. Last year, we were just happy to get here. This year, we're more confident and know what we need to do."

While Georgia is seeking its first NCAA title, Stanford is looking for its third in seven years.

The Cardinal comes to Charlotte on a school-record 23-game winning streak, something that didn't seem likely early in the season. For starters, while Stanford had 11 players back from last year's team, only two saw extensive action.

And the Cardinal had to adjust to playing for assistant coach Amy Tucker, who is running the team this season while coach Tara VanDerveer is directing the U.S. Olympic team.

To compound mates, the new-look Cardinal opened the year with a loss to Massachusetts.

"It took a lot for this team to come together. We had a lot of adversity," Tucker said. "We have battled through the problems, and that has helped create great chemistry on this team."

Seniors still hold key in Final Four matchups

NEW YORK (AP) – Even though the flood of underclassmen leaving school early has made college basketball the sport of what could have been, success is still synonymous with seniors.

There's top-ranked Massachusetts with bookend forwards Donta Bright and Dana Dingle; Kentucky with its outside-inside duo of Tony Delk and Walter McCarty; Mississippi State with 3-point specialist Darryl Wilson and rugged power forward Russell Walters; and Syracuse with point guard Lazarus Sims and star forward John Wallace.

People can reel off the names of the underclassmen who opted for the NBA draft after last season – sophomores Jerry Stackhouse and Rasheed Wallace of North Carolina, Joe Smith of Maryland and Antonio McDyess of Alabama. Then there were Arkansas juniors Corliss Williamson and Scottie Thurman and the rebuilding began after consecutive title game appearances.

But last year's national champion, UCLA, couldn't have won the school's 11th title without the senior trio of Ed O'Bannon, Tyus Edney and George Zidek.

"To win on the road you have to be a good team, but I believe you have to be a senior-oriented team to win an NCAA tournament," said John Calipari, whose Massachusetts Minutemen (35-1) play Kentucky (32-2) in the second semifinal after Syracuse (28-8) and Mississippi State (26-7) open Saturday's doubleheader. "I think when you talk about teams that are going to win championships, you better see teams dominated at some point by seniors. You have to have senior leadership."

Calipari has that in Bright and Dingle, two undersized forwards who have been overshadowed by All-American center Marcus Camby, who is weighing whether to stick around for his senior year, and the backcourt tandem of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso.

Delk made the move from point guard to shooting guard for the Wildcats after their first loss of the season, in November to Massachusetts. It's rare that a player good enough to be a second-team All-America is willing to sacrifice minutes for wins.

"It's not just him," Calipari said. "I think you have to understand what they did is they all stepped back, each player stepped back so they could take three steps forward. In our game, when it got a little crazy, they tried to do their own thing. Now they're not doing that."

Syracuse came close to being another of those schools that lost a star early, but Wallace pulled his name out of the draft and returned for a very successful senior season that saw him selected a second-team All-America.

"I hope it encourages them to stay," coach Jim Boeheim said of Wallace's decision. "I think I've long been an advocate that if you're really ready physically and mentally to go, there's nothing wrong with going. For the most part, most guys need to stay and work on their games and get better because the NBA needs you to be ready."

Wallace made the baseball pass that led to the tying basket at the close of regulation against Georgia in the regional semifinals and then made the winning 3-pointer with 2.8 seconds to go in overtime.

Wilson was the hero of the Bulldogs' regional semifinal victory over top-seeded Connecticut when he made seven 3-pointers and finished with 27 points. It was his outside shooting that opened things up all season for center Erick Dampier, a junior who may leap to the NBA.

"He has improved as a defensive player and that's been the thing he has improved the most this season."

While the players who draw the most attention this weekend will be the underclassmen who will spend the next month weighing pro options, the success for any of the teams will most probably be riding with the sport's endangered species, seniors.

Williams prefers the small-town atmosphere surrounding his rural Mississippi alma mater over the national attention surrounding the Final Four. These days, however, attention is finding Williams anyway. His team's surprising run through the NCAA tournament has suddenly put Starkville, Miss., population 19,000, on the map.

"I'm comfortable where I am. I'm comfortable being in a small town and being at Mississippi State," said Williams, a former math teacher whose playing experience was limited to being a substitute on a losing high school team.

The other Final Four coaches can have the high-profile positions, Williams says. Kentucky's Rick Pitino and Massachusetts coach John Calipari can do the commercials, and Syracuse's Jim Boeheim can pursue the high school All-Americans.

People want to know how, in 10 years, Williams has taken a team consistently near the bottom of the Southeastern Conference standings to the top of college basketball and led it into the NCAA semifinals against Syracuse.

When he replaced Bob Boyd in 1986, Williams had been Boyd's assistant for two years but had no other Division I experience. There were no great expectations. "The perception was it was a dead-end kind of job," Williams said. "There had been some excellent coaches who had been here, but they had not had a large measure of success."

Williams admits he had no long-range plan to turn State into a nationally recognized team. Faced with the job of enticing players to a school in an isolated part of Mississippi with no established basketball tradition, he just started recruiting in-state players in hopes of winning a few games.

"Honestly, we recruited the best players we had a chance to get at Mississippi State," Williams said. "We started out trying to recruit quality players, good students. We got very lucky in our first recruiting class. They turned out to be much better players than we expected."

Since Williams wasn't hired until after the 1985-86 season, that first recruiting class didn't come until a year later after a 7-21 season.

Those recruits, primarily Mississippians, had limited success the first two years. They made it to the 1990 NIT, and then a year later tied LSU for the SEC championship and went to the NCAA tournament.

"When we shared the championship with LSU in 1991, we knew we had done something significant," Williams said. "To fathom going to the Final Four is a dream, but I don't think it's something that being at Mississippi State, we said, 'This is what we will do.' We dreamed about it."

The Bulldogs are in their fifth postseason tournament in seven years, a run that has included three NCAAs and two NITs. Last year, they advanced further in the NCAA tournament than any other team in Mississippi history, moving into the round of 16 before losing to eventual national champion UCLA.

This team, ranked 19th in the final AP poll, is the first consistent winner at State since the 1965 departure of Babe McCarthy, who led the Bulldogs to three SEC titles in four years and their only other NCAA tournament appearance in 1963.

Success has led to Williams being mentioned for many coaching vacancies, including North Carolina-Charlotte and North Carolina State. He says he will listen.

"At any stage of your career, and in particular at this stage of my career, to completely shut out any inquiries or anybody who might have an interest in talking to me would be foolish," he said. "But at the same time, I'm not out looking for a job."

U.S. downs Ukraine behind Leslie scoring

Leslie scored 21 points in the first half and finished with 31 as the U.S. national women's team beat Ukraine 93-69 to remain unbeaten in pre-Olympic exhibition play.

A former Southern Cal star, the 6-foot-5 Leslie is trying to expand her game beyond posting up inside. She's playing outside more and made a 3-pointer Thursday night while going 13-for-23 from the field. "It's something I picked up from the European players, seeing the all-around game they have," said Leslie, who grabbed 11 rebounds and blocked two shots. "Their big players do a good job outside and shoot the three. That's something I've tried to work on in order to match up with the European style we'll be facing."

"I shoot 3s and I drive," she said. "Overall, it has helped me. One of the reasons this team has been effective is me drawing the other teams outside and then driving and dumping off to our posts."

Ruthie Bolton added 18 points for the U.S. team and Dawn Staley led a second-half run that broke the game open. Team USA is now 5-0 against Ukraine and 37-0 overall, including eight victories in China earlier this month. "This team has got a tremendous work ethic and maturity and that has really helped them stay focused in these games," U.S. coach Tara VanDerveer said. "That has helped them stay motivated to work hard and improve every game."

The U.S. team had assists on 27 of its 39 field goals. Leslie's 31 points were a high on the U.S. tour. She had scored 30 against Louisiana Tech on Jan. 30. "This is an extremely close team," Leslie said. "It's another thing that keeps us from getting complacent. We're a very close team off the court."

Michigan junior fares well in 1st day of NCAA meet

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) – Like all other swimmers who competed in the U.S. Olympic Trials a few weeks ago, Tom Dolan came to the NCAA championships feeling drained. Realizing his limits, he decided not to burden himself with expectations of repeating his triple victory of a year ago.

The Michigan junior who will represent the United States in three individual events this summer opened the NCAA meet by cruising to victory in the 500-yard freestyle in a pool-record time of 4 minutes, 12.77 seconds.

"I'm not sure what my body has left," said Dolan, who set U.S. records in winning the 500- and 1,650-yard freestyle and 400-yard individual medley in last year's NCAA meet. "I'm really looking more at just getting in there and racing whoever challenges me."

Although Michigan finished 1-2-5 in the 500 free, the Wolverines will be hard-pressed to defend their NCAA team title because they have only 11 swimmers here, compared to 16-18 for other top contenders.

Texas made the best use of its depth to take first place after day one of the three-day meet, which wraps up Saturday. The Longhorns finished with 170 points and a commanding lead over meet favorite Auburn, which scored 120.

Tennessee was third at 118.5, thanks mostly to relays. The Volunteers were second in the 200-yard freestyle relay and set a pool record with a 3:09.97 in the 400-yard medley relay.

Record, near record set in Penguin win

MIAMI (AP) – Mario Lemieux and Jaromir Jagr became only the second teammates to both score 60 goals in a season when each connected Thursday night in Pittsburgh's 3-2 victory over Florida.

Jagr also set a record for most points by a European player during one NHL season with 140. The old mark was set by Peter Stastny, who scored 139 points for Quebec in 1981-82.

Canadiens 4, Bruins 3, OT

BOSTON – Marc Bureau's second goal of the season at 2:07 of overtime lifted the Canadiens. Montreal has won all four meetings between the teams this season and is in fifth place in the NHL Eastern Conference, one point behind No. 4 Florida.

Ranford saved Lyle Odelein's rebound of Mark Recchi's shot 56 seconds into the overtime period and turned back 26 shots altogether. Montreal's Jocelyn Thibault turned away 41 shots.

Stars 3, Mighty Ducks 1

DALLAS – The Dallas Stars revived their punchless power play on goals by Brent Fedyk and Todd Harvey, keeping their slim playoff hopes alive with a 3-1 decision over the Anaheim Mighty Ducks on Thursday night.

The Ducks failed to gain ground on the eighth-place Winnipeg Jets in the Western Conference playoff race as Anaheim lost its ninth straight to Dallas. Anaheim, which had gone 6-1-1 in its last eight games entering Thursday, remained four points behind Winnipeg.

Roman Oksiuta was the Mighty Ducks' lone goal-scorer and Guy Hebert was strong in front of the net with 23 saves. Brent Gilchrist added an empty-net goal with 2.5 seconds left for the Stars.

Dallas is still in 11th place in the Western Conference standings at 61 points, eight behind Winnipeg, four behind Anaheim and three behind ninth-place Edmonton. Dallas has eight games left.

Devils 4, Blues 4

ST. LOUIS – Geoff Courtnall scored with 2:06 remaining in the third period Thursday night to lift the St. Louis Blues to a 4-4 tie with the New Jersey Devils.

Courtnall scored the second of his two goals on a power play after taking a pass in the slot from Wayne Gretzky, who had a goal and two assists.

He will be out for an indefinite period, a Blues spokesman said.

Pippen, Bulls crush Hawks

CHICAGO (AP) — Scottie Pippen returned to his All-Star form and helped the Chicago Bulls bounce back from their most shocking loss to defeat the Atlanta Hawks 111-80 Thursday night.

Pippen, averaging 13.3 points on 35 percent shooting during an injury-filled five-week span, had 16 points, 11 rebounds and eight assists as the Bulls rebounded from Sunday's 109-108 loss to the expansion Toronto Raptors.

Chicago improved to 61-8 overall and 35-0 at home.

Mariners may open season in Japan

The Associated Press

Talk about long road trips: The Seattle Mariners may open the 1997 season in Japan.

Baseball officials, who just completed negotiations to play regular-season games in Mexico this August, are discussing a deal in which Seattle would start next season in Japan, possibly against the Detroit Tigers.

"We hope it will happen. We think it's a good idea," said John Ellis, the Mariners chief executive officer.

Two years ago, officials began negotiations for a trip that would have had the Mariners and Tigers finish 1995 spring training with two exhibition games in Japan, then play two regular season games there before returning home.

That deal, which also included a postseason all-star tour of Japan following the 1994 season, was a casualty of the strike, which wiped out the 1994 World Series and delayed the '95 season. "There are obvious details that have to be worked out, including a collective bargaining agreement," said Tim Brosnan, the head of Major League Baseball International.

The Mariners' majority owner is Nintendo Co. Ltd. of Kyoto. The Tigers would be a natural opponent because they have Cecil Fielder, who in 1989 hit 38 homers for Hanshin in Japan's Central League.

Orioles

Bobby Bonilla won't be starting in right field, and he won't be at third base. The Baltimore Orioles have a new spot for him — designated hitter.

"Bobby is very valuable to us," manager Davey Johnson said. "He'll be our cleanup hitter all year long."

Johnson revealed his tentative lineup Thursday, and the biggest surprise was that Tony Tarasco will be starting in right field instead of Bonilla when the Orioles open Monday against Kansas City. At third will be B.J. Surhoff.

Johnson said his decision is no reflection of Bonilla's defense. "He's a good outfielder and a good third baseman, but we'd like to give some of our younger players an opportunity to play the outfield on an every-day basis," Johnson said. "Bobby will eventually play the field, but early on we want him to play DH."

Surhoff overcame a rocky start to claim the third base job. Johnson told Bonilla that early on he would be an "insurance policy" at third and the outfield.

On Thursday, Bonilla hit a two-run homer and an RBI single as the designated hitter in the Orioles' 12-5 exhibition loss to Atlanta.

Twins

Kirby Puckett reported vision problems, and was being tested by specialists. Team physician Len Michenzi said it was too early to tell whether the problem was serious, but doubted it was related to Puckett's beaning by Cleveland's Dennis Martinez on Sept. 28, 1995.

Puckett flew to Baltimore's Johns Hopkins eye clinic. His status for Minnesota's opener Monday against Detroit was unknown.

"I never had any problems with my eye before," Puckett said. "Everything was going great this spring. But right now, I'm not worried about opening day. My health is the most important thing.

"The doctor said this could clear up in a day, a week or more. We don't know. If I can't see, I can't play. ... It's kind of a waiting game now."

Red Sox

Red Sox manager Kevin Kennedy acknowledged Thursday that Mitchell, a late-signing free agent who missed the first month of camp, will probably stay in Florida to work on his hitting. Belinda, who's recovering from tendinitis, might start the season on the disabled list. "I want to make sure the 25 I take can help us win a game," Kennedy said. "It's not spring training anymore."

Kennedy said Mitchell injured his Achilles tendon taking first base on a dropped third strike Wednesday.

White Sox

"I'm getting the spring training blues," he said after an 0-for-4 outing in Chicago's 4-3 victory over Texas on a cold, rainy day before a small crowd at Nashville, Tenn. "You just can't wait for the season to start."

Cardinals

St. Louis trimmed its roster to 27 by returning second baseman Geronimo Pena and pitcher Matt Morris to the minors, and placing four players on the disabled list.

Pirates

Brewers

Nokes hit .244 with two homers and six RBIs in 19 games this spring. Narcisse was 0-1 with a 4.76 ERA in nine relief appearances.

Exhibition baseball

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Orlando Merced and Mark Johnson had two homers apiece as the Pittsburgh Pirates ravaged Dwight Gooden in a 10-6 victory Thursday over the New York Yankees.

Johnson was 5-for-5 while driving in two runs, and Merced 4-for-5 with four RBIs as the Pirates rocked Gooden for eight runs and 14 hits in five innings. Gooden, returning to baseball following from a 1½-year drug suspension, finished the spring 0-3 with an 8.88 ERA.

Merced hit two-run shots off Gooden in the first and second innings. Johnson's homers were solo shots, in the second off Gooden and in the eighth off John Wetteland.

Denny Neagle, the Pirates' top winner with a 13-8 record last season, held New York scoreless over his final four innings to finish the spring 5-1 with a 4.50 ERA in six starts. New York scored four runs in the first off Neagle, with Jim Leyritz's three-run homer capping the inning.

Braves 12, Orioles 5

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Fred McGriff homered twice and drove in five runs for Atlanta.

McGriff hit both homers off Orioles starter Jimmy Haynes, who yielded 12 runs and 11 hits in six innings. Atlanta starter Tom Glavine allowed four runs — three earned — and five hits in five innings to finish the exhibition season 4-0.

Ryan Klesko hit a two-run homer for the Braves, who conclude their exhibition schedule with games in Atlanta on Friday and Saturday. Bobby Bonilla and B.J. Surhoff homered for Baltimore.

White Sox 4, Rangers 3

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kirk McCaskill picked up his first victory of the spring, allowing three hits over two innings as Chicago beat Texas.

McCaskill hadn't pitched since March 20 when he gave up two runs and four hits in four innings against New York. But he allowed only an unearned run in the first against Texas for his first victory in five appearances.

Phillies 2, Blue Jays 2, tie

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Toronto's Paul Quantrill had his best outing of the spring as the Blue Jays and Philadelphia tied 2-2 before calling it quits after 11 innings.

Quantrill allowed two runs on three hits over six innings. He struck out one and walked none. Otis Nixon drove in both Toronto runs.

Phillies starter Mike Williams went seven innings and gave up eight hits. Darren Daulton drove in one run with a triple, and Jim Eisenreich knocked in the other with a sacrifice fly.

Twins 7, Red Sox 6

Puckett missed the game with vision problem in his right eye, and was flown to an eye clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. His status for opening day on Monday is uncertain.

Alex Delgado sparked the Red Sox

Tigers 5, Royals 2

HAINES CITY, Fla. — Bobby Higginson's two-run double keyed a four-run seventh inning, giving Detroit the victory over Kansas City in a rain-shortened game.

Eddie Williams opened the Detroit seventh with a double, and after an error by shortstop David Howard, Chris Gomez hit an RBI single off losing pitcher Hipolito Pichardo. Higginson's double followed, and Mark Lewis capped the scoring with a two-out RBI single.

Marlins 3, Expos 3, tie

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Derek Aucoin, ticketed by Montreal to be the closer at AAA Ottawa, pitched two hitless innings.

Aucoin struck out the side in the ninth and worked through the final inning — the 10th — before the game was called.

Padres 11, Mariners 4

Seattle, with its projected opening night lineup on the field and No. 2 starter Hitchcock on the mound, took a first-inning lead on Darren Bragg's leadoff home run. But the Padres rattled Hitchcock for four runs in the second inning on Brad Ausmus' three-run homer and Jody Reed's RBI single.

Brewers 6, Rookies 3

CHANDLER, Ariz. — Designated hitter John Jaha had a two-run homer and a run-scoring single as Milwaukee beat Colorado.

Jaha drilled a fastball from left-hander Lance Painter over the wall in right-center to break open a close game. After a slow start this spring, Jaha has five homers and 14 RBIs.

Airfares climbing up, up and away

By Jack Nease
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Spring is barely here, but for some it is time to begin planning summer vacations.

The so-called spring sale announced by Delta and other airlines last week is the tip-off. The sale fares weren't nearly the bargains offered travelers in past years.

One reason is the cuts were made in ticket prices that have reached very high levels.

Enjoying their best year of the decade, U.S. airlines have edged fares higher and higher. Some airlines have raised ticket prices four times this year, three times in February.

These stealth increases have gone largely unnoticed. Some of the increases came under cover of a tax cut. The federal government's 10-percent excise tax on tickets expired Dec. 31. Airlines promptly increased fares an average of 7 percent.

The tax is likely to be reinstated when Congress and the president finally agree on a new federal budget, and what happens then is unclear. One possibility: Ticket prices will go up another 10 percent.

In sparking the spring fare sales, Delta made the biggest cuts on international fares. The round-trip Cincinnati to Paris fare, for example, was cut to $559, a $240 reduction.

The domestic and international fare cuts apply to most travel from April 7 through May 31.

The high ticket prices that are bad for passengers are proving good for stock investors. Shares of American, United, Delta, Northwest and other airlines have hit record highs this month.

Shares of United, in fact, have more than doubled since July 1994, when United employees traded wage concessions for a 55 percent stake in the carrier. Higher ticket prices reflect two things:

A slightly stronger national economy has increased passenger traffic and airlines have fewer planes to fly them in, the result of airline efforts to reduce excess capacity.

How long this situation will last is anybody's guess. The strength of the national recovery is a subject of debate.

Further, it is not certain that summer vacationers are going to stand for the stealth fare increases. If past years are any indication, many potential travelers will wait for a price war to break out in May.

Meanwhile airlines are enjoying their best period since the 1990 recession. Most of them lost money from 1991 through 1993. And so far, what they are doing is successful.

But there are some indications that what the airlines are doing — charging every penny the market will bear on some routes — is akin to price gouging. If that is the public perception, the airlines will never escape their feast and famine tradition.

Farm designation offers Idaho tax haven

The Associated Press

BOISE — By seeding land with alfalfa and raising a crop, owners of a 54-acre Ada County parcel will save more than $60,000 in property taxes this year.

That is because the prime commercial land near downtown Boise is considered a farm under Idaho's property tax laws. So its owners paid about $2,600 in property taxes last year.

"That's the problem," Ada County Commissioner Roger Simmons said. "It's perfectly legal."

The proof was a certificate showing the land was idled under the federal Conservation Reserve Program. The owners plan to plant a crop this year.

"The law is very clear and it was designed just for circumstances where development is encroaching on agricultural land,"

Could a bagel put you to sleep?

There are those who say a bagel before bedtime prevents insomnia. "Carbohydrates stimulate insulin release which allows the brain to absorb more sleep-inducing tryptophan." So goes one explanation. Interesting, but unverified here.

Scholars say pet wolves were pulling sleds about 12,000 years ago.

The volcanic blowup in 1883 of Indonesia's Krakatoa - thought to be the loudest sound ever heard on earth - was not loud at its epicenter. Scientists say dust clouds absorbed all sound there.

Report is that 72 percent of this country's charitable foundations list assets of less than $1 million.

Where do you prefer to do your browsing? That favorite of the young, book stores? Hardware sections? Plant nurseries? Kitchen shops? Clothing departments? If none, get counseling. You'll note computer stores aren't listed here. They're different. They're not to ask baffling questions that make sales people roll their eyes. They don't know, either.

A. Clyde Beatty, renowned tamer from 1920 to 1960.

A convicted burglar with ambition upgraded his craft in a prison machine shop where he became skilled with an acetylene torch. Free again, he was next arrested for safecracking. Prison, say the crime historians, is a place of learning.

Yawn and those around you will yawn. You've seen that. It works, too, with shivering. With scratching. With grinning. But where it works in a most uncomfortable manner is less obvious. If you're tense, those around you likewise get tense.

Farm

said the owners' lawyer, Ken McClure of Boise.

Critics say the state law that shields farms from high property-tax rates is so out of whack that residential property owners are paying more than their fair share even though half the value of residential housing up to $50,000 is exempt from property taxation. Critics of that exemption claim it has simply shifted the property tax burden to business.

"If this kind of abuse was stopped, your taxes would go down 30 percent," said Custer County Assessor Robert Savage of Challis.

The number of people getting the tax break is four times higher than those who claim farming as their primary occupation.

Few argue with the premise farm land should not be taxed on its speculative value. A grower should not pay higher taxes just because someone thinks his land would be worth much more as a housing development.

But Idaho's farm definition is liberal. Besides the conventional 160-acre unit, it also says a parcel can be considered a farm if it is more than five acres and is used to produce field crops, as pasture for livestock or is part of a set-aside or rotation program.

If the parcel is less than five acres, the owner can still get an exemption if he proves the land produces 15 percent of his annual gross income or at least $1,000 in income.

'If this kind of abuse was stopped, your taxes would go down 30 percent.'

— Robert Savage,
Custer County assessor

Such an exemption can make an hugh difference in a tax bill. Its taxable value is calculated based on its ability to produce income. So farm land might be valued at $1,000 an acre for tax purposes, but may be worth many times more as residential land.

The Idaho Statesman reported that Idaho farmers last year paid about 7.3 percent of all property taxes, compared to 12 percent in 1985. Residential property owners saw their share rise from 49 percent to 54 percent in that time.

Gov. Phil Batt's Economic Stimulus Committee found that in 1994 business paid 70 percent of all property taxes while homeowners paid 30 percent.

County assessors have tried to change the valuation law.

But they have to get past the state's most powerful agricultural lobby. Idaho Farm Bureau spokesman Greg Nelson said he has no sympathy for developers who abuse an exemption meant to protect family farmers. But he does not want to increase the costs on those growers.

Briefly

Mortgage rates drop again

WASHINGTON — Thirty-year, fixed rate mortgages averaged 7.69 percent this week, down from 7.81 percent last week, according to a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the lowest since March 7, when rates averaged 7.38 percent. Rates had fallen to 6.94 percent on Feb. 15 — a two-year low — before rising to 7.83 percent on March 14.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.62 percent, up from 5.60 percent last week.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for those refinancing mortgages, averaged 7.19 percent this week, down from 7.32 percent a week earlier.

Business investment should fall

WASHINGTON — Business investment, a major driving force during the five-year economic expansion, is expected to drop this year to its slowest pace since the last recession.

Analysts said the capital spending report combined with a big jump in jobless benefit claims and the third straight week of falling mortgage applications point to an economy that still faces problems.

"The reports show that right now we have very modest economic growth, what I call sub par," said economist Sung Won Sohn of the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis.

"But as we look at the second half of the year, the softer capital spending numbers and declining mortgage applications should create some concerns about maintaining even the current soft rate of growth."

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that a survey shows capital spending likely to increase just 1.5 percent, to $603.4 billion, far less than the gains of 8.1 percent in 1995 and 12.3 percent in 1994.

Pooch receives credit card offer

MONROE, N.C. — If Janosch Troll ever ends up in the doghouse with his creditors, they'll have only themselves to blame.

Janosch received a letter last week offering him a GE Corporate Plus Visa card — "an exciting, new corporate charge card that's accepted at over 12 million locations."

Just one bone of contention: Janosch (pronounced YON-ush) is a 14-year-old miniature poodle. "He's a champion and a prize winner, but a credit card?" asks an incredulous Vickie Mundy of Monroe, who owns the chocolate-colored canine and the VIP Kennel where he lives. "I guess they thought he was the president of some big conglomerate."

In a letter addressed to Janosch, General Electric urged the award-winning pooch to complete the application. The dog, whose full name is Janosch Vom Braunen Troll, would enjoy discounts on car rentals, hotel rooms, and long-distance phone bills. He can even request cards for his employees.

Utah firm may move department

PROVO, Utah — Novell will be moving its purchasing department and possibly several smaller operations to San Jose, with as many as 200 employees being affected, a newspaper says.

"There is a small group moving, I'm not sure which one it is," Novell spokesman Bob Ingols told the Deseret News in a copyright story published Wednesday.

Ingols said the number of employees involved was "somewhere between zero and 200. I think it's 200."

He said he wasn't sure when the relocation would be complete although the decision to move was firm. The move apparently is an effort to save money and consolidate some operations.

Ad spending in newspapers rises

RESTON, Va. — Spending in newspapers by the nation's top 100 advertisers jumped 12.8 percent to $13.3 billion last year, a newspaper trade association said Thursday.

Fueled by growth in classified advertising, total newspaper revenue from advertising grew 5.7 percent to $36 billion in 1995, the Newspaper Association of America said.

The association represents 1,500 newspapers, most of them dailies, in the United States and Canada.

John Sturm, the association's president and chief executive officer, said the growth in advertising revenue reflected the confidence advertisers have in newspapers as a way to reach consumers.

Utah corporation loses ground

SALT LAKE CITY — Corel Corp. has reported a net loss of $6.6 million on net sales of $36.4 million for its first quarter, blaming the poor performance on sluggish sales of applications for Microsoft's Windows 95.

The loss per share came to 12 cents, company officials said on Wednesday, specifically blaming lackluster sales for its newest version of CorelDRAW.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE (b) Bobby Wolff

"People could survive their natural trouble all right if it weren't for the trouble they make for themselves." — Ogden Nash

"The odds were with us but the gods were not," lamented a rueful South. "With either ace onside or a 3-3 break in hearts, we make the game."

Could South have timed the play to overcome the bad breaks?

Dummy's diamond king went to East's ace and East returned the jack to dummy's queen. South drew trumps and tried three rounds of hearts, hoping for a 3-3 split. West won, led a fourth heart for South to ruff and South tried a tricky "Chinese Finesse." Placing the club ace with East, he led his club jack, hoping West would duck. However, West had an easy cover and the game went one down when South lost two clubs.

How can South improve his chances to score the game? After drawing trumps, he should cash the king and ace of hearts and lead the diamond nine from dummy. East must cover and South discards his low heart. East is now finished. He must either give South a stuff and ruff or lead from his club ace. Either way, South has his 10th winner.

What if East had held a safe heart exit after he scored his diamond 10? If he leads a third heart, South ruffs and hopes for a 3-3 split. If East started with four hearts (unlikely), then South is no worse off. He must play for the club ace to be with West.

ANSWER: Two hearts. Not much in high cards, but the good trump support is worth a raise for both constructive and pre-emptive purposes.

By John Crook
TV Data

They cast reflections. They scoff at crucifixes. And, yes, sometimes they even drink ... wine.

They're the new breed of vampires depicted in "Kindred: The Embraced," an action drama series premiering Tuesday, April 2, on Fox. (It moves into its permanent Wednesday slot the following evening).

Set in contemporary San Francisco, the series centers on five sophisticated vampire clans who call themselves the Kindred. In a Mafia-like interaction (think "The Bloodfather"), these clans operate in every walk of life, careful to protect a strict code of secrecy called "the masquerade," which ensures they will not be discovered and hunted down by humans.

Series creator John Leekley sensed fertile dramatic ground in the interaction between the Kindred and humans. But he chose to chuck a lot of what he calls "the Bram Stoker tired stuff" of Gothic vampire tradition when he created these multifaceted characters. (In one of the show's slyest conceits, the "Dracula" author was paid by the Kindred to disseminate misinformation about their species, to allow them to mingle with humans more efficiently).

"It's funny, when people think of vampires, they only think of the vampire mythology that was made up by Bram Stoker, who simply invented it," he says. "Almost none of it is actually the world tradition of vampires from the Middle Ages. We now think about sleeping in dirt and funny accents and fangs and all this stuff - garlic strings and crosses.

"I found that the real mythology of vampires was actually much deeper and very powerful. At the center of this mythology is that in the Middle Ages they called them 'Kindred.' The reason they did that is because they are, in fact, our kin. They are us - the 'us' that we fear."

A repressive society and the religious establishment created these creatures as a sinister personification of what would happen if human desires were given free rein, Leekley adds.

"That was so feared that they had to invent creatures who had done that, and then crucify them," he explains. "In the Spanish Inquisition, in the actual original records, there are translated documents ... saying that they had caught, tortured and burned people because they had 'admitted' to being vampires.

"Then the Church and the State (could) go to people and say, 'See? We told you! We're protecting you now.' And also, 'Don't be like this. You must follow the rules.'"

In "Kindred," Julian Luna (Mark Frankel, "Fortune Hunter") rules the five vampire clans and tries to keep peace between them. After a beautiful Kindred named Alexandra (Kate Vernon) sacrifices herself to ensure the safety of her human lover, homicide Detective Frank Kohanek (C. Thomas Howell), Frank bitterly vows to destroy Julian and his companions.

Meanwhile, a love affair is heating up between Julian and Caitlin Byrne (Kelly Rutherford), the fiery Irish editor of the newspaper Julian owns. At first, Caitlin has no inkling of her lover's true nature.

"As a journalist, she is the last person who would ever allow herself to believe such a thing as the existence of supernatural creatures such as vampires," Leekley says. "Also, she's very closed down sexually, which makes it even more delicious that she is lovers with a vampire. It's sort of the most intimate coming out for a woman."

Q: Is Val Kilmer having serious financial and personal problems? – LL.

A: Things could be smoother for Kilmer, 35, who's piled up solid reviews for his portrayal of a deranged bank robber in "Heat," but less enthusiastic notices for his title role in "Batman Forever."

Also, his seemingly idyllic seven-year marriage to Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, 31, fell apart soon after she starred in "Scarlett," the much ballyhooed TV sequel to "Gone With the Wind." The couple have a 5-year-old daughter, Mercedes, and a 9-month-old son, Jack.

My Hollywood spies report that Kilmer and his brother, Mark, have been ordered to pay more than $750,000 to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in connection to a bank loan they guaranteed for their late father. The brothers are appealing the judgment. As mentioned, life could indeed be smoother.

A: I can say from personal observation that Reece, host of the syndicated TV show "The Extremists with Gabrielle Reece," sports a large tattoo just above her right ankle. I spotted it — and Reece, who's 6 feet 3 inches tall and hard to miss — at a recent TV convention in Las Vegas.

The tattoo is similar in design to the cross Reece wears around her neck. It's a reminder, she says, of her late father, who died in an airplane crash when she was 5 years old. Gabrielle, 26, is much too levelheaded to etch romantic notions on her body.

Q: Several obituaries of George Burns and his career allude to a live act that he regularly trotted out around the country with Bob Hope. Which one of these comedy superstars got top billing at these engagements? – D.Z.

A: Invariably, Hope deferred to Burns in the billings, presumably because George was older and had been around show business longer. Audiences who caught the act recall that each icon contributed individual numbers, then teamed for some very funny repartee.

"It was wonderfully nostalgic entertainment," recalls a fellow comic. "The big difference between them was that Hope, good as he was, could have phoned his routines in — they were old hat and somewhat mechanical. Burns, however, brought all the zest of a teenager, constantly sprucing up his act. He was vigorous, dedicated and very humorous while on stage."

Q: With so many celebrities, both past and present, coming out of the closet, I'm surprised that I haven't heard anything yet about Gertrude Lawrence. Is it true that Gertie had affairs with other women along the way? – W.G.

A: Rumors about Lawrence, the legendary theater star whose life story was made into the 1968 movie "Star!" with Julie Andrews, have surfaced for years, but they have always been hard to pin down.

Now, a photograph of Lawrence, taken when she was 24, shows her in a reclining pose, smiling seductively at the camera. The inscription reads, "To my woman, from Me," and is signed "Young Lawrence, 1922" — in Lawrence's handwriting, according to experts.

A: Newman, who turned 71 in January, has survived many race car crashes without injury. He did recently break a bone in his left hand. But it didn't happen on a high-speed track. Another driver reportedly drove over the center divider on a highway near Newman's Connecticut home and collided with the star's Volvo.

Paul downplays the incident, saying he was much more upset about the broken car than the broken hand. Wife Joanne Woodward was also in the car but escaped uninjured.

Q: Isn't it true that Vendela, that fabulously beautiful Swedish-born model, is trying to sleep her way to movie stardom with a big time studio mogul? – L.K.

A: I wouldn't suggest that to Vendela, the 28-year-old bombshell who recently appeared on segments of "The Larry Sanders Show" and "Murphy Brown." Yes, she's serious about acting. She even takes lessons.

Vendela's modeling and commercial earnings for the last five years total about $9 million. She broke through as a Sports Illustrated swimsuit model and then as the face of Almay cosmetics.

For the past five years, Vendela has been the significant other of movie mogul Jon Peters. Barbra Streisand's former live-in love. Last year, however, they split up. The level-headed, businesslike Vendela says she plans to wed Norwegian businessman Olaf Thommessen, 29, this August.

A Hollywood career seems more or less assured, but it won't happen under ex-lover Peters' aegis. Vendela feels she can make it on her own. We'll have to wait and see.

Q: Can you explain all the talk of Tony Danza being in rough physical shape after a nasty skiing accident a few years ago? We saw a Las Vegas appearance a while back, and he looked fine to us. – E.B.

A: In 1993, while skiing in Utah, Tony hit a rock and careened into a tree. At first, word was that the 44-year-old former "Taxi" star had only suffered broken ribs. But then he went into intensive care at the hospital, followed by serious back surgery. The final report mentioned five broken ribs, internal bleeding and bruising.

Apparently, the Brooklyn-born actor, currently appearing on the sitcom "Hudson Street," has made a complete recovery. Not only is he doing singing-dancing gigs in Las Vegas, he's fielding offers to appear in a sequel to "Angels in the Outfield." Danza is so confident these days, he's even considering skiing once again.

Q: Isn't Debbie Reynolds trying desperately to revive her movie career because her business in Las Vegas is in trouble? – B.G.

A: Just the opposite, Debbie tells me. The 64-year-old co-star of the late Gene Kelly in the movie classic "Singin' in the Rain" says that her Las Vegas venture is doing just fine. One reason is that Reynolds herself is regularly on hand at the hotel's Hollywood-themed variety show. She's the biggest draw in the place.

But daughter Carrie and son Todd convinced her to grab the title role in actor-comedian Albert Brooks' new flick, "Mother," even though it means leaving Las Vegas for a Hollywood sound stage.

A: For about 10 years, Gere has been combining his two great interests – Buddhism and photo studies – during travels to the Himalayas in connection to his deep devotion to the religion.

As for the quality of his photographs, he's currently part of a group show in Los Angeles. His pictures are on display alongside those of such masters as Henri Cartier-Bresson, Alfred Stieglitz and Man Ray.

I hear Gere's work has been selling in the $1,500 to $1,800 range, with Gere earmarking the money for his foundation, which promotes Tibet and the endangered Tibetan culture.

Soap Summaries

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL

Ridge and Lauren went to Brooke's house but there was no sign of Brooke. Jessica told Sly that she may be pregnant, and he could not have been happier. Dylan started his new job. Sally told Macy how upset she was about Clarke's wanting to see CJ. Ridge checked around to see if anyone had heard from Brooke but no one had. Sly assumed Stephanie already knew about Jessica being pregnant and thought she would be upset. Stephanie exploded and kicked Sly out of the house.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

After Keesha collapsed, Neil and Malcolm took her to the hospital where she was diagnosed with pneumonia. Silva had Jill sign papers to start divorce proceedings but it was all news to John, who felt he was still the better parent for Billy. Ashley and Jack had a difference of opinion about Dina and what was best for their father. John overheard their conversation, then told them that they must accept whatever happened between him and Dina. Dr. Reid questioned his own professional ethics when Phyllis all but attacked him in his office. Sharon refused to let Nikki get to her but it was becoming increasingly more difficult.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Tom's professional skills, honed under the duress of his time in Africa, paid off with a career bonus. At a gathering at Luke's, Garcia notified the guests that many of them were being considered suspects in the death at Ward House. Lily confided some sad news to Sonny while the love-struck Brenda had a dream of kissing him. Lois pushed forward with the benefit concert for Ward House.

THE CITY

Zoey was thrilled when she finally met Val Zeller, the woman she was convinced was her mother. When Zoey learned that Val was not her mother, she felt abandoned and ran away. Azure told Bernardo that she was unable to ever have children. Angie threw Lorraine for a loop when she showed up at the bar and told Lorraine to keep out of her life. An angry Ally waited for Jocelyn to tell Alex the truth about her being a hooker. Alex, having lost the call-girl investigation, confronted Tony about his knowing more than he had let on. Tony conceeded and admitted that he thought Alex had been sandbagged by Jared, Malcolm and Joey.

ALL MY CHILDREN

It was difficult for Erica, but she admitted to being the driver of the car that ran into Maria and Kelsey. Taylor spotted Noah and Julia and went after them. Noah went ahead to find the right trail, leaving the unsuspecting Julia alone as Taylor approached. Tad and Charlie had a heart-to-heart talk about Liza and Tad confessed his indiscretion. Maria revived her vendetta against Tad and planned to tell Dixie about his affair with Liza herself. Adam sensed something was going on between Brooke and Pierce when Brooke said she would like to explore dating with Pierce.

Doidre Hall

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

When Maggie got a visit from her father, John, she told him of her plans to become a nun. Unbeknownst to Andy or Antonio, Levin got Sonya to admit that she saw the fight. Anxious to spend time together, Jessica and Cris headed for the cabin in Joey's car but got into an accident. Carlo told RJ about his plans for revenge against Asa. While Asa prepared for his wedding to Alex, Carlo made love to her in San Domenico. In spite of Tina's efforts to avoid her attraction to Cord, neither one could resist the other.

GUIDING LIGHT

Dinah and Hart watched "Gaslight" as they worked on their plan to make Roger believe he is going crazy. On the day of the board meeting to promote Amanda, Alexandra returned home and revealed that she knew about Amanda's past. A robbery at the Spaulding mansion went awry. Annie let Reva have it for all the trouble she has caused. Lucy, stunned to learn of Buzz's marriage, confronted him about not telling her. Holly had false labor and She and Fletcher were concerned when a sonogram showed a possible problem with the baby.

ANOTHER WORLD

Blair was emotional when she and Gary came face to face for the first time. John, fighting for his life, had a nightmare. Gary revealed to Josie that Cobra was alive and that Cobra was in fact Blair. Sofia was devastated when Joe told her about the deal he made with Nick. When Gabe was evasive about his upcoming trip to Boston, Lorna made plans to follow him. Blair confronted Josie at her apartment and made a stunning revelation. Morgan continued to have problems dealing with Courtney's rape. Jake manipulated an emotional Donna into helping him oust Matt from "The Herald."

AS THE WORLD TURNS

Diego warned Emily that no one should ever find out about them. A suspicious Kirk revealed he had been keeping tabs on Emily by watching her on a secret closed-circuit television. Mike defended Carly to Mark, who thought Carly was still pushing her way into Mike's life. Lisa admitted to Kim that she believed John wanted to kill her. Mark told Mike that he was in love with a woman he couldn't have. Emily sneaked into Diego's room just as the sleepless Sam walked in. John created an elaborate evening for Lisa at the Lakeview Ballroom and she agreed to get married as planned.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

In a desperate bid to save her relationship with John, Kristen engaged in an emotional talk with Marlena. A startled Vivian climbed into bed expecting to find Ivan but was greeted by a man from her past. Jennifer was left with choosing between the two men who love her – her ex-lover Jack Lucas and Carrie went up to the ski lodge and Carrie was upset to see that it was the same place where she first made love to Austin. Bo and Hope returned to Salem, eager to move on with their lives. Abe had been searching all of Salem for Stefano, but Stefano had been in Vivian's bed making love to her.

'As the World Turns' celebrates 40 years

Milestones seem to be popping up more often these days in the world of daytime television. Next Tuesday, April 2, "As the World Turns" celebrates its 40th anniversary. When the show debuted in 1956, it was a different world, but over the years the subjects have become increasingly more provocative.

Soap studs
John N. Goudas

"As the World Turns" has had its share of such soap staples – kidnappings, murder trials, infidelity and amnesia yarns – over the four decades but it has also dealt with such controversial issues as AIDS, drug dependency, Alzheimer's disease, euthanasia, interracial love, teen suicide and even incest.

Eighteen years ago, a lovely young actress named Colleen Zenk joined the show in the role of Barbara Ryan. At the time, Colleen and I had lunch and she discussed her anxieties about acting. Back then she appeared mostly in musicals and was eager to do well as an actress.

Well, 18 years later Colleen is still doing business at the old stand and has built quite a following among faithful viewers of "As the World Turns."

We spoke recently on the phone and Colleen said she was amazed that 18 years have gone by. Douglas Marland, the late head writer of the show, recognized the vulnerability that Colleen could display in the role and gave her a series of plots that he labeled "The Perils of Pauline."

"Barbara was the new ingenue on the show," said the veteran actress. "She was kidnapped, shot, abused and thrown from pillar to post during those early years. The thing that Douglas would always say is that Barbara was a survivor. Her awful marriage to James almost did her in, but she survived. Her subsequent marriage to Gunnar didn't turn out as she wished, but she survived. Survival has become the key word in Barbara's life."

Colleen Zenk Pinter
Barbara on 'ATWT'

The actress admits that she has been somewhat underutilized of late but she sees the arrival of her son Paul (now in his late 20s) as a catalyst which should bring Barbara back to a front-burner story.

In her private life, Colleen says she couldn't be happier. She and her husband, Mark Pinter, have a wonderful life together. They have three children of their own and with Mark's other three from a previous marriage, the Pinter household is often buzzing with activity.

Collen is very proud of the fact that Mark recently won a Soap Opera Digest Award as Outstanding Villain for "Another World." She says Mark had gone through a tough period before landing the role of Grant Harrison but he seems to be finally getting his due.

The Pinters are enjoying their time at work and at home. Colleen is quite content and confessed that she wouldn't mind chalking up another 18 years on "As the World Turns."

Under Goldberg's able helmsmanship, awards were long on heart and daring but short on dazzle

By Kinney Littlefield
Orange County Register

Such sense, such sensibility. A newly humble Oscar showed his brave heart to the world Monday night, with a surprisingly honest telecast masterfully helmed by Whoopi Goldberg.

Produced for the first time by veteran composer/producer Quincy Jones, this year's Oscarcast was unusually simple and straightforward - and perhaps thankfully so. Given the Rev. Jesse Jackson's protest against the dearth of black nominees – canceled at the last minute in deference to Goldberg and Jones – an opulent, self-congratulatory bash would have seemed inappropriate.

Instead, Oscar gave us more than 3½ hours of modesty and simplicity, buoyed by tearful tributes and heart-grabbing speeches – and sadly sunk by the bland look of the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion from which it aired to about 1 billion viewers worldwide.

Still, second-time host Goldberg made sure that Oscar was filled with guts and gumption right from the start.

"So, did you miss me?" she asked first-off, with the poise of a woman who knew she was being warmly welcomed back after David Letterman's much-dissed hosting effort last year.

Looking classically elegant in understated black velvet, Goldberg eschewed the multicolored ribbons protesting racism in Hollywood that were called for by Jackson.

"You don't ask a black woman to buy an expensive dress and then cover it with ribbons," Goldberg said tongue-in-cheek. Then she got deadly serious, her eyes darting fire with "I had something I wanted to say to Jesse Jackson here, but he's not watching so why bother?"

In all, Goldberg was a fearless leader – poised, sly, spicy, sparing no one, including Sen. Bob Dole, Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan, the Disney song "Colors of the Wind," and breast enhancement by some female members of the audience.

Hers was a heroic effort on a night full of televised heroism, including a put-it-all-in-perspective speech by the Holocaust survivor profiled in winning short-subject documentary "One Survivor Remembers," who defined winning as a crust of bread. Heroism also shone in the features of the woman who found Anne Frank's diary, on stage to help accept the documentary feature Oscar for "Anne Frank Remembered." And it shone in the touching acceptance of the Lifetime Achievement award by frail-looking Kirk Douglas while his actor-son Michael Douglas cried in the audience.

But it was actor Christopher Reeve, paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair, who defined the spare and gutsy night as he introduced a montage of socially responsible films, seemingly fighting for breath as he spoke.

In Jones' hands, Oscar '96 felt closer to a preproduced, edited magazine show with different types of segments rolled in than the traditional seamless all-live special.

Network tricks ripe for gripes

By David Bianculli
New York Daily News

You know what really bothers me about TV these days? Glad you asked.

Here's the latest list – a list I intend to update regularly:

• Overly revealing promos: How many times have you seen a network's on-air promo for one of its upcoming sitcoms or episodic dramas, only to realize that it has given away most of that show's plot twists and secrets? If you're like me, way too many.

One amazingly infuriating recent example came just before NBC's "The Babysitter's Seduction," a mystery telemovie in which Stephen Collins played a widower who may or may not have killed his wife. The story was carefully constructed so that, for the first third of the drama, viewers could just as easily have suspected the family baby-sitter of the crime – except, that is, for the NBC announcer whose first four words in promoting the film, seconds before it began, were: "He killed his wife!"

At times like that, killing the announcer would be justifiable homicide.

• Dead months: We're in one now, so you know what I'm talking about.

September and October make up the busy start of the fall season, and November, February and May are highly competitive sweeps months, when you're guaranteed to see original episodes of your favorite series, as well as the most ambitious telemovies, miniseries and specials.

But TV basically closes for the holidays in December, and the remaining months of the official TV season – January, March and April – bring a bunch of new (mostly inferior) series, but deprive us of fresh episodes of most of the old ones. Hey, guys, they're old because they're the ones viewers are most interested in.

How many new episodes of "Murphy Brown" or "ER," for example, will we see between now and May? One episode is a good guess. None is even better.

It's not fair to viewers, and it sure doesn't help TV maintain its already-dwindling audience levels.

• Utterly stupid announcements: "Taped before a live audience" is a good example. What other kind of audience is there?

A favorite contact at one network – let's call him Deep Gripe – sent a letter enjoyably pointing out another. "See if you can get somebody to explain 'All New Episode!' Does this mean my network colleagues have been sneaking in partly new episodes?"

As a matter of fact, yes. They're called clip shows, or retrospective specials, or episodes where one character lapses into a coma so the rest can stroll down memory lane.

• Skating specials: In the last month alone, ABC has presented seven prime-time hours of ice skating, CBS has presented three and Fox has presented two. No one, I suspect, saw them all, though I'd be tempted to thaw them all.

Worth watching

"The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air" – In this repeat from January, Will gets pushed around by a two-fisted woman who challenges him to a fight at the gym. NBC.

"Melrose Place" – Listless one week, over the top the next, this once-addictive nighttime soap has fallen on hard times. In a bid to shake things up, the producers have signed Loni Anderson and Justine Priestley, who begin their recurring roles tonight. FOX.

New York Daily News

During the hubbub this year over the-often salacious content of daytime talk shows, neither host Leeza Gibbons nor her NBC gabfest, "Leeza," were mentioned by those doing the bashing. "It's almost a victory by omission," Gibbons noted during a recent interview.

Of course, there is something of a downside to such an omission: less media attention.

"As much as you can say we've stayed above the fray, we also want to compete," she said. "We need to be included in the (daytime talk) category."

After two years, "Leeza" has competed enough for inclusion in a category that is not to be sniffed at these days: shows making it to their 500th episode. This year alone, six daytime gabbers have been issued pink slips: Danny Bonaduce, Mark Walberg, Carnie Wilson, Gabrielle Carteris, Charles Perez and George Hamilton and Alana Stewart. "Leeza's" clip-filled 500th arrives Wednesday (10 a.m., NBC).

Gibbons admits that without the protection of a network behind her, she might not be celebrating her milestone. "In the syndicated world, we may have been sacrificed," she said. "We may not have had enough time to get our message out."

"Leeza" debuted in January 1994. This February – a quarterly ratings period used by local stations to set future rates – ratings were up 13 percent compared to the year before. "Leeza" is up a huge 44 percent since February 1994.

Gibbons said that because she's been so busy worrying about the next day's show, she has never allowed herself to think about the show lasting this long. Now, she's feeling emboldened.

Personal triumphs dominate Oscars

In a ceremony long on minutes (three hours, 36 minutes) and relatively short on controversy, Hollywood celebrated itself with such tableaux as a father bawling for his daughter and a son crying for his father.

From the brash performance of the musical group Stomp to the moving acceptance speeches from the makers of two Holocaust documentaries, the international broadcast swerved from the joyous to the solemn.

In the days before the Academy Awards, the issue of minority hiring took the spotlight and polarized Hollywood. Complaints were sparked by how few minorities were up for an award this year. Of 166 nominees, only one – live-action short film director Dianne Houston – was black, and she didn't win.

The lack of nominations failed to have much of an impact on the show, however, serving only as fodder for some caustic jokes by host Whoopi Goldberg.

Despite the black comedian's curt dismissal of the issue, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said Tuesday he was confident minorities would play a greater role in Hollywood and that small protests in several cities had been fruitful.

"We raised consciousness within the industry," Jackson said. And in a swipe at Goldberg, he added: "An irreverent dismissal of our struggle to open doors was not a kind thing."

Other activists took offense at Goldberg's derisive opening monologue joke about how many ribbons – including Jackson's rainbow ribbon – she could have worn to the show. (Only show co-producer Quincy Jones wore a rainbow ribbon on the telecast.)

"She owes an apology," said Willis Edwards, former president of the Hollywood-Beverly Hills NAACP. "She doesn't have to go on stage and put down the movement. ... If it wasn't for the movement, there wouldn't be a Whoopi Goldberg hosting the show or a Quincy Jones producing the show."

In one of half a dozen such receptions, Kirk Douglas received an honorary Oscar for his body of acting and philanthropic work. His once-booming voice slurred by a recent stroke, Douglas spoke eloquently of his wife and family.

"I see my four sons," the 79-year-old Douglas said, as cameras showed his children wiping away tears. "They are proud of the old man. And I am proud, too. Proud to be a part of Hollywood for 50 years. But this is for my wife, Ann. I love you."

Even more inspiring was the surprise appearance by Christopher Reeve, paralyzed last year in a horse-jumping accident. Dressed in a tuxedo and his eyes sparkling, Reeve spoke firmly to a hushed and teary audience about the need to make movies with powerful human messages.

"Hollywood needs to do more," he said from his wheelchair as celebrities including Tom Hanks wiped away tears. "Let's continue to take risks. Let's tackle the issues. In many ways our film community can do it better than anyone else. There is no challenge, artistic or otherwise, that we can't meet."
